this volume deals with the law governing the administrative implementation of european union public policy much of this law is specific to individual policy sectors the volume provides a study of such specialized administrative law for more than twenty sectors this cross sectoral approach allows for detailed comparisons of eu administration in diverse policy fields it identifies situations where legal structures and approaches may be unnecessarily duplicated thus indicating where a comprehensive general system could be advantageous for both union law and policy achievement the comparative nature of the study also draws attention to policy fields which have proven to be testing grounds for approaches adopted subsequently in other areas in addition the work highlights the distinctive highly networked and strongly cooperative character of eu administration as a reflection of and a foundation for the operative nature of the european union as a whole in diplomatic material jason dittmer offers a counterintuitive reading of foreign policy by tracing the ways that complex interactions between people and things shape the decisions and actions of diplomats and policymakers bringing new materialism to bear on international relations dittmer focuses not on what the state does in the world but on how the world operates within the state through the circulation of humans and nonhuman objects from examining how paper storage needs impacted the design of the british foreign office building to discussing the 1953 nato decision to adopt the 30 caliber bullet as the standard rifle ammunition dittmer highlights the contingency of human agency within international relations in dittmer s model which eschews stasis structural forces and historical trends in favor of dynamism and becoming the international community is less a coming together of states than it is a convergence of media things people and practices in this way dittmer locates power in the unfolding of processes on the micro level thereby reconceptualizing our understandings of diplomacy and international relations this book critically analyses the changing role and nature of post cold war humanitarianism using foucault s theories of biopolitics and governmentality it offers a compelling and insightful interpretation of the policies and practices associated with new humanitarianism in general as well as of the dynamics of two specific international assistance efforts the post 2001 conflict related assistance effort in afghanistan and the post 2000 chernobyl related assistance effort in belarus the central argument of the book is that new humanitarianism represents a dominant regime of humanitarian governing informed by globalising neoliberalism and is reliant on a complex set of biopolitical disciplinary and sovereign technologies it demonstrates that while the purposes of humanitarian governing are specific to particular contexts its promise of care is more often than not accompanied by sovereign and or biopolitical violences making an important contribution to existing scholarship on humanitarian emergencies and humanitarian action on biopolitics and governmentality this book will be of much interest to students and scholars of humanitarianism critical security studies governmentality and international relations generally
