historical continuity in the emergence of modern hebrew offers a new perspective on the emergence processes of modern hebrew and its relationship to earlier forms of hebrew based on a textual examination of select case studies of language use throughout the modernization of hebrew. this book shows that due to the unconventional sociolinguistic circumstances in the budding speech community, linguistic processes did not necessarily evolve in a linear manner, blurring the distinction between true and apparent historical continuity. the emergent language's standardization involved the restructuring of linguistic habits that had initially taken root among the first speakers, often leading to a retreat from early contact-induced or non-classical phenomena. yael reshef demonstrates that as a result, superficial similarity to earlier forms of hebrew did not necessarily stem from continuity, and deviation from canonical hebrew features does not necessarily stem from change.

in its transition from 18th century capital of the ottoman empire to economic powerhouse of the turkish republic the city of istanbul has been transformed beyond recognition after the establishment of the republic turkey increasingly turned to the west for ideas about how to create shape and direct the development of a modern culture this desire was felt most strongly in istanbul turkey s most populous city its status as the capital of the ottoman empire and later the economic hub of turkey made istanbul a forum for the different regimes to display their political ideological and social policies in the context of the built environment some modernisation policies never came to fruition such as the unsuccessful late nineteenth century attempt by young ottoman bureaucrats to initiate planning reforms at a time when the empire was on the verge of collapse the new turkish republic at first neglected the old ottoman capital and later attempted to make it conform to its secular political ideology after world war ii istanbul entered a new era in modernisation with the democratic party government conducting a large scale re design of istanbul s urban form in order to show turkey as a major political and economic force in post war europe and the middle east the scale of this modernisation process mirrored the spectacular transformation of paris a century before thousands of buildings were demolished boulevards were carved out within the old city and whole new residential neighbourhoods were created in telling the story of this dramatic transformation murat gül investigates and traces the impact of these changing policies on the very fabric of the city itself in its streets buildings and landscapes and in the process provides new insights into the history of turkey
