this book explores responses to authoritarianism in turkish society through popular culture by examining feature films and television serials produced between 1980 and 2010 about the 1980 coup envisioned as an interdisciplinary study in cultural studies rather than a disciplinary work on cinema the book advocates for an understanding of popular culture in discerning emerging narratives of nationhood through feature films and television serials directly dealing with the coup of 1980 the book exposes tropes and discursive continuities such as childhood and the child it argues that these conventional tropes enable popular debates on the modern nation s history and its myths of identity

the book considers the persistent tendency to represent the middle east as a region enclosed in less permeable boundaries this perspective of enclosure haunts middle eastern studies and is part of ongoing cultural debates on cross border circulation currently challenged by spectacular outbursts of violence along resurfacing lines of division this critical study analyses selected works of four contemporary anglophone migrant writers from the middle east namely rabih alameddine diana abu jaber laila halaby and elif shafak to demonstrate that in spite of the forceful lines that remain after religious ethnic and political disputes this region does not exist as a rigidly delimited place in the writing of migrants who reclaim it back from beyond its boundaries rather than being a permanent location it is constructed as a place that flows into other places and is constantly reshaped by a variety of personal stories migrant trajectories departures and returns
