what is a just way of spending public resources for health and health care several significant answers to this question are under debate public spending could aim to promote greater equality in health for example or maximize the health of the population or provide the worst off with the best possible health another approach is to aim for each person to have enough so that her health or access to health care does not fall under a critical level this latter approach is called sufficientarian sufficientarian approaches to distributive justice are intuitively appealing but require further analysis and assessment what exactly is sufficiency why do we need it what does it imply for the just distribution of health or healthcare this volume offers fresh perspectives on these critical questions philosophers bioethicists health policy makers and health economists investigate sufficiency and its application to health and health care in fifteen original contributions

The Criminal Justice System and Health Care

this book examines questions of medical accountability and ethics it analyses how the criminal justice system regulates health care practice and to what extent it can and should be used as a tool to resolve ethical conflict in health care for most of the twentieth century criminal courts were engaged in matters relating to medicine principally as a forum to resolve ethical controversies over the sanctity of life however the judiciary approached this function with reluctance and a marked tendency to defer to the medical profession to define what constituted ethical and thus lawful conduct however over the past 25 years criminal courts have increasingly been drawn into these types of question and the criminal law has become a major actor in the resolution of ethical conflict the trend to prosecute for aberrant professional conduct or medical malpractice and the role of the criminal process in medicine has been analytically neglected in the uk there is scant literature addressing the appropriate boundaries of the criminal process in resolving ethical conflict the theoretical legal analysis of the law s relationship with health care or the practical impact of the criminal justice system on professionals and the delivery of health care in the uk this volume addresses these issues via a combination of theoretical analyses and key case studies drawing on the experiences of other carefully selected jurisdictions it places a particular emphasis on the appropriateness of the involvement of the criminal justice system in health care the limitations of this developing trend and solutions to the problems it throws up the book takes euthanasia as a primary example of the issues raised by the intersection of health care and the criminal law and questions whether health care issues appropriately fall within the remit

Mental Health and the Criminal Justice System in this volume allen buchanan collects ten of his most influential essays on justice and healthcare and connects the concerns of bioethicists with those of political philosophers focusing not just on the question of which principles of justice in healthcare ought to be implemented but also on the question of the legitimacy of institutions through which they are implemented with an emphasis on the institutional implementation of justice in healthcare buchanan pays special attention to the relationship between moral commitments and incentives the volume begins with an exploration of the difficulties of specifying the content of the right to healthcare and of identifying those agents and institutions that are obligated to help ensure that the right thus specified is realized and then progresses to an examination of the problems that arise in attempts to implement the right through appropriate institutions in the last two essays buchanan pursues the central issues of justice in healthcare at the global level exploring the idea of healthcare as a human right and the problem of assigning responsibilities for ameliorating global health disparities taken together the essays provide a unique and consistent position on a wide range of issues including conflicts of interest in clinical practice and the claims of medical professionalism the nature and justification for the right to health care the relationship between responsibility for healthcare and the nature of the healthcare system and the problem of global health disparities the result is an approach to justice in healthcare that will facilitate more productive interaction between the normative analysis of philosophers and the policy work of economists lawyers and political scientists lawrence c becker introduces an unconventional set of background ideas for future philosophical work on normative theories of basic justice the organizing concept is habilitation the process of equipping a person or thing with functional abilities or capacities the specific proposals drawn from the concept of habilitation are independent of any particular set of distributive principles the result is a framework for theory that includes a metric for the pursuit of basic justice but not a normative theory of it the basic idea is that receiving and providing habilitation is a lifelong necessity for human beings from the nearly helpless newborn state through the struggle to survive and thrive thereafter even into the most severe diminishment of old age this lifelong human necessity underlies all questions about basic justice and the possibilities for habilitation define the circumstances under which those questions arise focusing on the circumstances of habilitation calls attention to the central role of physical and psychological health without basic good health in both domains it is not possible to cope with the habilitative demands of one s physical and psychological endowments and one s physical and social environments and for human beings a particular aspect of human health effectively sums up these matters namely human agency the nature and extent of the ability to act effectively the book proposes specifically that normative theories of basic justice adopt the habilitation framework what then appears to follow is that the most plausible comprehensive metric for assessing progress toward basic justice will be the level and distribution of basic good health moreover achieving robustly healthy agency will be the most plausible tactical target for making progress toward basic justice no matter what one s favored distributive principles might be
