in notebooks english virtuosi and early modern science richard yeo interprets a relatively unexplored set of primary archival sources the notes and notebooks of some of the leading figures of the scientific revolution notebooks were important to several key members of the royal society of london including robert boyle john evelyn robert hooke john locke and others who drew on renaissance humanist techniques of excerpting from texts to build storehouses of proverbs maxims quotations and other material in personal notebooks or commonplace books yeo shows that these men appreciated the value of their own notes both as powerful tools for personal recollection and following francis bacon as a system of precise record keeping from which they could retrieve large quantities of detailed information for collaboration the virtuosi of the seventeenth century were also able to reach beyond bacon and the humanists drawing inspiration from the ancient hippocratic medical tradition and its emphasis on the gradual accumulation of information over time by reflecting on the interaction of memory notebooks and other records yeo argues the english virtuosi shaped an ethos of long term empirical scientific inquiry
