walsh's book is not only thorough, thoughtful, and clearly written; it is also timely because as social work practice applications with their parallel knowledge bases continue to multiply, the questions walsh addresses so competently are cutting edge for adopting a social work approach to practice in human services. peter de jong, solution focused therapist trainer and consultant and emeritus professor of social work, calvin college, usa, based in part on original research with over 50 practitioners, this absorbing book provides a practice model for solution focused helping developed from real life experiences across a number of settings. the book begins by reviewing the original de shazer and berg practice model, establishing a case for change, and then introduces a new concept for the solution focused helper. case examples are used to demonstrate the application of this new model in five different practice settings: healthcare, learning disabilities services for older people, and end of life care, community development services for globalised diverse communities, reflective exercises, and research reviews are included for each setting, as well as sections on policy contexts and ethical dimensions. the solution focused helper will support students and practitioners who are already familiar with the basic concepts and principles of solution focused work and who wish to develop their practice and deepen their knowledge.

the transformation of child care after welfare reform in new york city and the struggle against that transformation is a largely untold story in the decade following welfare reform. despite increases in child care funding, there was little growth in new york's unionized center-based child care system, and no attempt to make this system more responsive to the needs of working mothers, as the city delivered child care services on the cheap, relying on non-union home child care providers. welfare rights organizations, community legal clinics, child care advocates, low income community groups, activist mothers, and labor unions organized to demand fair solutions to the child care crisis that addressed poor single mothers' need for quality, affordable child care, as well as child care providers' need for decent work and pay. social reproduction and the city tells this story, linking welfare reform to feminist research and activism around the crisis of care, social reproduction, and the neoliberal city. at a theoretical level, simon black's history of this era presents a feminist political economy of the urban welfare regime, applying a social reproduction lens to processes of urban neoliberalization and an urban lens to feminist analyses of welfare state restructuring and resistance. feminist political economy and feminist welfare state scholarship have not focused on the urban as a scale of analysis, and critical approaches to urban neoliberalism often fail to address questions of social reproduction. to address these unexplored areas, black unpacks the urban as a contested site of welfare state restructuring and examines the escalating crisis in social reproduction. he lays bare the aftermath of the welfare to work agenda of the giuliani administration in new york city on child care and the resistance to policies that deepened race, class, and gender inequities.
