Winslow Homer (February 24, 1836 – September 29, 1910) was an American landscape painter and illustrator best known for his marine subjects. He is considered one of the foremost painters of 19th-century America and a preeminent figure in American art in general. Winslow Homer was an American painter whose works, particularly those on marine subjects, are among the most powerful and expressive of late 19th-century American art. His mastery of sketching and watercolor lends to his oil paintings the invigorating spontaneity of direct observation from nature.

Winslow Homer (1836–1910) is regarded by many as the greatest American painter of the nineteenth century. Born in Boston and raised in rural Cambridge, he began his career as a commercial printmaker, first in Boston and then in New York, where he settled in 1859. From the late 1850s until his death in 1910, Winslow Homer produced a body of work distinguished by its thoughtful expression and its independence from artistic conventions. A man of multiple talents, Homer excelled equally in the arts of illustration, oil painting, and watercolor.

Winslow Homer (February 24, 1836 – September 29, 1910) was an American landscape painter and printmaker best known for his marine subjects. He is considered one of the foremost painters in 19th-century America and a preeminent figure in American art. The Gulf Stream (Winslow Homer, American, 1899, reworked by 1906) is on view at the Met Fifth Avenue in Gallery 767. In Homer's epic saga set along the Gulf Stream, a black man faces his possible demise on the deck of a distressed boat while threatened by sharks and a waterspout. Renowned for his powerful paintings of American life and scenery, Winslow Homer (1836–1910) remains a consequential figure whose art continues to appeal to broad audiences. This exhibition reconsiders Homer's work through the lens of conflict, a theme that crosses his prolific career. Why is Winslow Homer a household name in the USA, and what makes his art so important? Follow Homer's journey at a time of great upheaval in American history.
