aspiring composer found himself in paris then the cultural capital of the western world it is at this point in his autobiography that mr nabokov cheerfully yields the center of the stage to the magnificent diaghilev the impresario of impresarios who exerted so great an influence on the music art and theater of his day much has been written about his personality most of it laudatory some of it critical but rarely has the writer been a man of nabokov s keen observation and careful judgment his account of the diaghilev he knew and of the various toilers in the diaghilev ballet company which produced his own ode is fascinating reading here is a poignant description of the mad nijinsky s excursion to see lifar perform nabokov s long friendship with stravinsky has provided new material for a stimulating study of this great composer and his music and the author s account of visit with igor stravinsky in his california home is both delightful and instructive since the early 30s nabokov has bene writing and teaching in america new compositions of his have been commissioned by the koussevitzky foundation and have been played by the boston symphony the philharmonic in new york and other leading american orchestras he has become an american citizen and during the war served as a cultural officer attached to the army his particular concern was the musical life of berlin after the surrender and his experiences there attempting to cooperate with the russians close this absorbing memoir dust jacket

Music in the Air 2016-05-28 excerpt from the music primer the object of this work is to impart the power to read vocal music the plan is similar in every respect to a graded series of literary readers music in fact is a language and should be learned just as any other language is learned by using it as the philosophy of language or gram mar can only be taught when the language is well known so the technical ities of music must come late in the course everything in this system tends to cultivate the power to do yet a careful presentation of theoretic elements induces a growing independence on the part of the pupil from the beginning care is taken to make the pupil familiar with musical effects before they are named for instance the words major and minor are admitted only when the effects which these words represent are perfectly familiar to the ear all non musical and unscientific representations of music such as diagrams figures circles etc are avoided experience proves that the full staff representation when properly presented is the simplest possible any representation to the eye of effects which are known only through the ear is of necessity purely arbitrary there being no natural relation whatever between the thing and its sign hence the assumed superiority of some modern devices is purely imaginary the songs are such as a child who has accomplished the preceding exercises can actually read and are therefore of a thoroughly educational character about the publisher forgotten books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books find more at forgottenbooks.com this book is a reproduction of an important historical work forgotten books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy in rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition we do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works
