Ersatz Krieg: A True Story of Men Captured, But Not Conquered 2011-10-17 capture japan investigates the formation of visual tropes and how these have contributed to perceptions of japan in the global imagination the book proposes that images are not incidental in the formation of such perceptions but central to notions about identity history and memory from a tentative western ally in 1952 to a soft power superpower with a huge global influence in the 21st century the book locates questions about japan in the global imagination to the country's transforming geopolitical position by adopting an interdisciplinary approach with a multiplicity of perspectives from around the world capture japan goes beyond binarisms to uncover how images can also produce discourses that challenge subvert or even contradict each other the word capture in the title of the book recognises both the deeply problematic role that images have played in relation to colonialism as well as the potential dominance that visual spectacles can wield in a contemporary context diverse essays from a wide range of perspectives investigate the institutional framework that has allowed certain types of images of japan to be promoted while others have been suppressed in doing so the book points to a vast network of images that have shaped the perception of japan both from within and from outside revealing how these images are inextricably linked to wider ideological political cultural or economic agendas

Capture: The heart of God for the nations 1858 reading canonical works of the nineteenth century through the modern transformation of human animal relations from audubon's still life watercolors to muybridge s trip wire locomotion studies from melville s epic chases to poe s detective hunts the nineteenth century witnessed a surge of artistic literary and scientific treatments that sought to capture the truth of animals at the historical moment when animals were receding from everyday view in capture antoine traisnel reveals how the drive to contain and record disappearing animals was a central feature and organizing pursuit of the nineteenth century u s cultural canon capture offers a critical genealogy of the dominant representation of animals as elusive precarious and endangered that came to circulate widely in the nineteenth century traisnel argues that capture is deeply continuous with the projects of white settler colonialism and the biocapitalist management of nonhuman and human populations demonstrating that the desire to capture animals in representation responded to and normalized the systemic disappearance of animals effected by unprecedented changes in the land the rise of mass slaughter and the new awareness of species extinction tracking the prototyping of biopolitical governance and capitalist modes of control traisnel theorizes capture as a regime of vision by which animals came to be seen over the course of the nineteenth century as at once unknowable and yet understood in advance a frame by which we continue to encounter animals today

Capture Your Dream 1897 the realistic generation of virtual doubles of real world actors has been the focus of computer graphics research for many years however some problems still remain unsolved it is still time consuming to generate character animations using the traditional skeleton based pipeline passive performance capture of human actors wearing arbitrary everyday apparel is still challenging and until now there is only a limited amount of techniques for processing and modifying mesh animations in contrast to the huge amount of skeleton based techniques in this thesis we propose algorithmic solutions to each of these problems first two efficient mesh based alternatives to simplify the overall character animation process are proposed although abandoning the concept of a kinematic skeleton both techniques can be directly integrated in the traditional pipeline generating animations with realistic body deformations thereafter three passive performance capture methods are presented which employ a deformable model as underlying scene representation the techniques are able to jointly reconstruct spatio temporally coherent time varying geometry motion and textural surface appearance of subjects wearing loose and everyday apparel moreover the acquired high quality reconstructions enable us to render realistic 3d videos at the end two novel algorithms for processing mesh animations are described the first one enables the fully automatic conversion of a mesh animation into a skeletonbased animation and the second one automatically converts a mesh animation into an animation collage a new artistic style for rendering animations the methods described in the thesis can be regarded as solutions to specific problems or important building blocks for a larger application as a whole they form a powerful system to accurately capture manipulate and realistically render realworld human performances exceeding the capabilities of many related capture techniques by this means we are able to correctly capture the motion the timevarying details and the texture information of a real human performing and transform it into a fully rigged character animation that can be directly used by an animator or use it to realistically display the actor from arbitrary viewpoints
