blending social analysis and philosophy albert borgmann maintains that technology creates a controlling pattern in our lives this pattern discernible even in such an inconspicuous action as switching on a stereo has global effects it sharply divides life into labor and leisure it sustains the industrial democracies and it fosters the view that the earth itself is a technological device he argues that technology has served us as well in conquering hunger and disease but that when we turn to it for richer experiences it leads instead to a life dominated by effortless and thoughtless consumption borgmann does not reject technology but calls for public conversation about the nature of the good life he counsels us to make room in a technological age for matters of ultimate concern things and practices that engage us in their own right this accompaniment to taylor's documentary film of the same name which premiered at the toronto international film festival in 2008 is a peripatetic effort to bring philosophy to the streets taylor speaks with today's most influential thinkers in settings that give meaning and inspiration to the discussions most notable are peter singer's thoughts on ethics and consumption in the middle of busy fifth avenue michael hardt's talk of revolution in a rowboat in central park and slavoj iek strolling through a garbage dump while criticizing environmentalism there are also appearances by cornel west avital ronell kwame anthony appiah martha nussbaum and judith butler both the book and the film attempt to make philosophy approachable and the majority of the discussions here do just that taylor for better or worse refrains from any overarching theme or commentary although her interactions with these thinkers do go beyond mere interviews to productive philosophical debates as in life in the end it is the walks and the fruitful conversations that are important recommended for public libraries look for the dvd review in a future issue ed steven chabot ontario ministry of labour toronto copyright reed business information a division of reed elsevier inc all rights reserved
