glenn petersen flew seventy combat missions in vietnam when he was nineteen launching from an aircraft carrier in the tonkin gulf he d sought out the weighty responsibilities and hazardous work but why what did the cultural architecture of the society he grew up in have to do with the way he went to war in this book he looks at the war from an anthropological perspective because that's how he's made his living in all the subsequent years it's how he sees the world while anthropologists write about the military and war these days they do so from the perspective of researchers what makes this a fully original contribution is that Petersen brings to the page the classic methodology of ethnographers participant observation a kind of total immersion he writes from the dual perspectives of an insider and a researcher and seeks in the specifics of lived experience some larger conclusions about humans social lives in general Petersen was long oblivious to what had happened to him in Vietnam and he fears that young men and women who've been fighting the US military's wars in Afghanistan and Iraq might be similarly unaware of what's happened to them skills that allowed him to survive in combat in particular his ability to focus tightly on the challenges directly in front of him seemed to transfer well to life after war the same intensity led him to a successful academic career including the time he represented the Micronesian islands at the United Nations how could anything be wrong then surreptitiously the danger the stress and the trauma he'd hidden away broke through a brittle shell and the war came spilling out as an anthropologist he sees in this a classic pattern an adaptation to one set of conditions is put to a new and practical use when conditions change but in time what had once been beneficial turns into maladaptive behavior in writing about why we fight he sheds lights on what the fighting does to us there is much excitement in the design and verification community about assertion based design the question is who should study assertion based design the emphatic answer is both design and verification engineers what may be unintuitive to many design engineers is that adding assertions to rtl code will actually reduce design time while better documenting design intent every design engineer should read this book design engineers that add assertions to their design will not only reduce the time needed to complete a design they will also reduce the number of interruptions from verification engineers to answer questions about design intent and to address verification suite mistakes with design assertions in place the majority of the interruptions from verification engineers will be related to actual design problems and the error feedback provided will be more useful to help identify design flaws a design engineer who does not add assertions to the rtl code will spend more time with verification engineers explaining the design functionality and intended interface requirements knowledge that is needed by the verification engineer to complete the job of testing the design
