colin sparks provides a challenging reassessment of the impact of the collapse of communism on the media systems of eastern europe he analyzes both the changes themselves and their implications for the ways in which we think about the mass media while also demonstrating that most of the orthodox accounts of the end of communism are seriously flawed there are much greater continuities between the old system and the new than are captured by the theories that argue that there has been a radical and fundamental change instead of marking the end of critical inquiry or the end of history as some have suggested sparks argues that the collapse of the communist systems demonstrates how very limited and frequently incorrect the main ways of discussing the mass media are he concludes with a provocative discussion of the ways in which we need to modify our thinking in the light of these developments

the most divisive and damaging aspect of the church in america is the combination of racism and white supremacy that has been woven into the fabric of the church to the degree that one cannot discuss the church in america apart from this sin nowhere is this clearer than in american methodism including the united methodist church that denomination which has been divided for decades over issues regarding human sexuality and homosexuality is a product of a long history of racism and white supremacy while initiatives have been taken to address these matters there has not been any effort to help the church focus on being anti racist in its practices or public witness at every level including local church levels this is a book that identifies this sin and offers an innovative look at the mission of the church based on biblical witnesses to new life with the resurrection it offers proposals for reparations and renewal that will come when the church woke
