Stewart finally got his way and deployed to England in the fall of 1943 as the commanding officer of the 703rd Bomb Squadron, 445th Bomb Group, flying the B-24 Liberator, a four-engine heavy bomber. Piloting aircraft was extremely dangerous in World War II, and Stewart was striving for a job more dangerous than rifleman on the ground. After nine months as an instructor pilot, Stewart got a billet in a unit training up for deployment to England. The 703rd Bomb Squadron, Stewart however persisted, and by late 1943 he was commander of the 703rd Bomb Squadron, 445th Bomb Group at Tivenham, Norfolk, flying B-24 Liberators. Stewart flew 20 combat missions over Germany, gaining the Distinguished Flying Cross and the Air Medal before being transferred as group operations officer to the 453rd Bomb Group in early 1944. More than 18,000 feet above the German city of Fürth, the World War II B-24 bomber they call Dixie Flyer has just delivered its full payload onto a German manufacturer, devastating it. A licensed civilian pilot, Stewart enlisted in the Army Air Forces early in 1941. In January 1944, at the rank of captain, he was assigned to the 453rd Bombardment Group, 2nd Combat Bombardment Wing, Eighth Air Force, operating out of East Anglia, England. Throughout his combat career, Stewart flew as lead pilot in B-24 Liberators. Stewart's war record included 20 combat missions as command pilot over enemy territory, including raids deep into Germany to Berlin. Over the next year, Stewart completed additional pilot courses, qualifying as a twin-engine and four-engine bomber pilot and as an instructor in both types of aircraft. It was at the graduation ceremonies following qualification as a B-17 pilot in February 1943 that Stewart received a shock.
