an inside look at who's watching you what they know and why it matters we are being watched we see online ads from websites we've visited long after we've moved on to other interests our smartphones and cars transmit our location enabling us to know what's in the neighborhood but also enabling others to track us and the federal government we recently learned has been conducting a massive data gathering surveillance operation across the internet and on our phone lines in dragnet nation award winning investigative journalist julia angwin reports from the front lines of america's surveillance economy offering a revelatory and unsettling look at how the government private companies and even criminals use technology to indiscriminately sweep up vast amounts of our personal data in a world where we can be watched in our own homes where we can no longer keep secrets and where we can be impersonated financially manipulated or even placed in a police lineup angwin argues that the greatest long term danger is that we start to internalize the surveillance and censor our words and thoughts until we lose the very freedom that makes us unique individuals appalled at such a prospect angwin conducts a series of experiments to try to protect herself ranging from quitting google to carrying a burner phone showing how difficult it is for an average citizen to resist the dragnets reach her summer hours at the robbers library about the nature of solitude and privacy in a culture where our laws technology and lifestyles are increasingly chipping away at them both why do we often long for solitude but dread loneliness what happens when the walls we build around ourselves are suddenly removed or made impenetrable if privacy is something we can count as a basic right why are chipping it away these are some of the themes that sue halpern eloquently explores in these essays in pursuit of the riddle of solitude halpern talks to trappist monks and secular hermits corresponds with a prisoner in solitary confinement and visits and aids hospice and a shelter for the homeless places where privacy is the first and perhaps the most essential thing to go this is a book that lends weight to the ideas that have become dangerously abstract in a society of data bases and car faxes a guide not only to the routes of solitude but to the selves we discover only when we arrive there adopting a multidisciplinary approach to the distinction between public and private this lucidly written book covers an interesting and eclectic mix of topics such as citizenship rorty arendt and marriage with spin often playing an exaggerated role in politics it is sometimes difficult to understand legal and judicial issues apart from their presentations by the media this collection of articles combines discussions of ethical issues within and about the news and entertainment industries with descriptions of similar issues in politics in general the volume explores the theme of freedom versus responsibility it can therefore serve as a resource for the person interested in theories of justice and discrimination as well as the depiction of minorities in the media it's that
