the massive growth of the internet has made an enormous amount of information available to us however it is becoming very difficult for users to acquire an applicable one therefore some techniques such as information filtering have been introduced to address this issue recommender systems filter information that is useful to a user from a large amount of information many e-commerce sites use recommender systems to filter specific information that users want out of an overload of information 2 for example amazon.com is a good example of the success of recommender systems 1 over the past several years a considerable amount of research has been conducted on recommendation systems in general the usefulness of the recommendation is measured based on its accuracy 3 although a high recommendation accuracy can indicate a user's favorite items there is a fault in that only similar items will be recommended several studies have reported that users might not be satisfied with a recommendation even though it exhibits high recommendation accuracy 4 for this reason we consider that a recommendation having only accuracy is satisfactory the serendipity of a recommendation is an important element when considering a user's long-term profits a recommendation that brings serendipity to users would solve the problem of user weariness and would lead to exploitation of users' tastes the viewpoint of the diversity of the recommendation as well as its accuracy should be required for future recommender systems

Alexander Bogdanov (1873-1928) wrote the articles in this volume in the years before and during the revolution of 1905 when he was co-leader with V. I. Lenin of the Bolshevik faction of the Russian Social Democratic Labour Party and was active in the revolution and the struggle against Marxist revisionism. In these pieces Bogdanov defends the principles of revolutionary social democracy on the basis of a neutral monist philosophy, empiriomonism, the idea of the invariable regularity of nature, and the use of the principle of selection to explain social development. The articles in On the Psychology of Society (1904-06) discredit the neo-Kantian philosophy of Russia's Marxist revisionists, rebut their critique of historical materialism, and develop the idea that labour technology determines social consciousness. New World (1905) envisions how humankind will develop under socialism, and Bogdanov's contributions to Studies in the Realist Worldview (1904-05) defend the labour theory of value and criticise neo-Kantian sociology.

although this book was first published in 1919 it remains highly relevant to social problems encountered today uniquely steiner s social thinking is not based on intellectual theory but on a profound perception of the archetypal spiritual nature of social life as he suggests in this classic work society has three distinct realms the economic the political individual human rights and the cultural spiritual while social life as a whole is a unity the autonomy of these three sectors should be respected if our increasing social problems are to be resolved steiner relates the ideals of liberty equality and fraternity to modern society economics calls for fraternity political rights require equality while culture should be characterized by liberty the slogans of the french revolution he suggests can become truly manifest only when our social thinking is transformed to correspond to the spiritual reality this volume is a translation from german of die kernpunkte der sozialen frage in den lebensnotwendigkeiten der gegenwart und zukunft ga 23
