the model productivity labor capital product prices simulations of changes in relative prices simulations of growth what are the main issues in chile s trade agenda this paper argues that the country s agenda does not lend itself to that traditional kind of policy advice usually given throughout latin america protection is low and uniform institutions that govern trade policy are strong and well protected from capture and the country has put a lot of effort in opening markets in the region and abroad the important issues that come out of the analysis are to a great extent second generational that is export diversification the regional distribution of trade gains completion of the multidimensional trade strategy and transport costs whereas chile has made progress in diversifying its exports away from copper concentration is still high even when compared to other resource intensive countries on the regional issue it seems clear that chile s export led growth in the last two decades was not evenly distributed across the regions on chile s multidimensional trade strategy asia is clearly the missing link in the country s wide net of preferential agreements and the evidence available suggest that transport costs are these days a more important obstacle to chile s trade than traditional trade barriers it seems almost trite to introduce this book by saying that man has been exploiting the intertidal zone for food for a long time just how long nobody knows for sure but the prehistoric inhabitants of terra amata on the mediterranean coast near nice ate marine intertidal animals at least 300 000 years ago similar impressive evidence going back to at least 100000 years exists for prehistoric man s consumption of intertidal animals along the south african coast however early man s dependence on intertidal resources probably goes back much further in time during the last 2 million or so years temperate eurasia experienced some 20 glaciations interspersed by warm equable periods different modes of life were open to man in colonizing the northern temperate zone one was to become a big game hunter specializing for example on mammoths the other to exploit marine intertidal resources of the two probably the shoreline offered an easier environment for an original scavenging food gatherer this title is part of uc press s voices revived geology stratigraphy and sedimentology the military coup that toppled chilean president salvador allende in 1973 led to one of the most repressive military dictatorships in latin american history although the coup s full origin remains one of the great mysteries of the cold war most assume that powers in washington were largely to blame given the long history of u s interventionism in latin america these assumptions were only strengthened by ongoing suspicions about the nixon administration s role in a failed campaign to prevent allende s inauguration in 1970 providing a comprehensive account of the nixon administration s efforts to undermine and unseat allende the book relies heavily on newly declassified records addressing several crucial questions regarding u s involvement the author explores several counterfactual scenarios to highlight important turning points and crucial decisions which contributed to the failure of chilean democracy chile has benefited from strong business lawyers we aim to provide a broad descriptive overview of chile s social issues in comparison to other countries and over time in order to place the recent social unrest in historical and international perspectives which can help prepare the ground for future policy priorities we follow an eclectic approach classifying a broad set of indicators along six dimensions inequality across i income ii perception iii access iv opportunity v redistribution and vi location the analysis puts forward a set of descriptive findings first income inequality declined substantially but remains high also compared to countries with similar level and path of development second chile seems to be one of the few countries in latin america with declining inequality where perceived inequality actually increased third notwithstanding an increase in social spending access to essential services appears limited particularly for middle and lower income classes amid fast growth of out of pocket health expenses relatively faster growth of cost of living for the relatively poorer and remaining weaknesses in the pension and education systems fourth inequality of opportunity is high with limited competition fifth fiscal redistribution has improved markedly but remains low by international standards finally inter regional inequality has declined substantially over the last two decades reaching
