at the crossroads between international relations and anthropology the migrant passage analyzes how people from el salvador honduras and guatemala navigate the dangerous and uncertain clandestine journey across mexico to the united states however much advance planning they do they survive the journey through improvisation central american migrants improvise upon social roles and physical objects leveraging them for new purposes along the way over time the accumulation of individual journeys has cut a path across the socioeconomic and political landscape of mexico generating a social and material infrastructure that guides future passages and complicates borders tracing the survival strategies of migrants during the journey to the north the migrant passage shows how their mobility reshapes the social landscape of mexico and the book explores the implications for the future of sovereignty and the nation state to trace the continuous renewal of the transit corridor noelle brigden draws upon over two years of in depth multi sited ethnographic fieldwork along human smuggling routes from central america across mexico and into the united states in so doing she shows the value of disciplinary and methodological border crossing between international relations and anthropology to understand the relationships between human security international borders and clandestine transnationalism while the great war raged across the trench lined battlefields of europe a hidden conflict took place in the distant hinterlands of the turbulent mexican republic german officials and secret service operatives plotted to bring war to the united states through an array of schemes and strategies from training a german mexican army for a cross border invasion to dispatching saboteurs to disrupt american industry and planning for submarine bases on the western coast of mexico bill mills tells the true story of the most audacious of these operations the german plot to launch clandestine sea raiders from the mexican port of mazatlán to disrupt allied merchant shipping in the pacific the scheme led to a desperate struggle between german and american secret agents in mexico german consul fritz unger the director of a powerful trading house plotted to obtain a salvaged mexican gunboat to supply u boats operating off mexico and to seize a hapless tramp schooner to help hunt allied merchantmen unger s efforts were opposed by a colorful array of individuals including a trusted member of the german secret service in mexico who was also the top american spy the u s state department s senior officer in mazatlán the hard charging commander of a navy gunboat and a draft dodging american informant in the enemy camp full of drama and intrigue treacherous passage is the first complete account of the daring german attempts to raid allied shipping from mexico in 1918 purchase the audio edition a sweeping account of three gujarati muslim trading communities whose commercial success over nearly two centuries sheds new light on the history of capitalism islam and empire in south asia during the nineteenth century three gujarati muslim commercial castes the bohras khojas and memons came to dominate muslim business in south asia although these communities constitute less than 1 percent of south asia s muslim population they are still disproportionately represented among the region s leading muslim owned firms today in no birds of passage michael o sullivan argues that the conditions enabling their success have never been understood thanks to stereotypes embraced equally by colonial administrators and muslim commentators that estrange them from their religious identity yet while long viewed as hindus in all but name or as westernized muslims who embraced colonial institutions these groups in fact entwined economic prerogatives and religious belief in a distinctive form of muslim capitalism following entrepreneurial firms from gujarat to the hijaz hong kong mombasa rangoon and beyond o sullivan reveals the importance of kinship networks private property and religious obligation to their business endeavors this paradigm of muslim capitalism found its highest expression in the jamaats the central caste institutions of each community which combined south asian islamicate and european traditions of corporate life the jamaats also played an essential role in negotiating the position of all three groups in relation to british authorities and indian muslim nationalists as well as the often sharp divisions within the castes themselves o sullivan s account sheds light on gujarati muslim economic life from the dawn of colonial hegemony in india to the crisis of the postcolonial state and provides fascinating insights into the broader effects of capitalist enterprise on muslim experience in modern south asia the many attempts by navigators to find a northwest passage via its pacific portal all ended in failure however their discoveries spurred expansionist developments that would forever alter the landscape of north america in discovering nothing david l painful history it is also the story of the author's own odyssey to rediscover her family's past in both Japan and Canada and as a key figure in the movement to win redress from the government today's tech savvy and digitally connected students present a new challenge for today's school librarians this book offers the 21st century tools and know how necessary for educators to appeal to and challenge students to learn and to want to learn what are the best ways to motivate students to become engaged and develop a passion for learning can appealing to their desire for socialization and constant communication attributes of their lives outside of education via the integration of cutting edge technologies and new media in the library or classroom serve to ignite creativity curiosity and critical thinking this book shows how you can make use of non traditional tools such as popular social networks collaborative technologies and cloud computing to teach information and communications technologies integrated with the school curriculum to improve student learning and demonstrates how these same technologies can help you measure skills and mastery learning the book provides an easy to follow blueprint for using collaborative techniques innovation and teaching for creativity to achieve the new learning paradigm of self directed learning such as flipping the classroom or library readers of this book will find concrete step by step examples of proven lesson plans collaborative models and time saving strategies for the successful integration of American Association of School Librarians AASL standards the authors both award winning teachers explain the quantitatively and qualitatively measurable educational value of using these technologies for core curricular and information and communications technologies instruction showing that they both enhance student learning outcomes and provide data for measuring their impact on learning the study and practice of end of life care has seen an increasing understanding of the need for care that integrates clinical psychosocial spiritual cultural and ethical expertise yet no one existing volume pulls together perspectives from a diverse array of religions with ethical dilemmas and clinical problems in view safe passage coaches clinicians and others on the front lines of care on understanding how to incorporate different traditions of thinking into the most difficult of moments around the end of life the book is structured around five major moments of realization when disease progresses when emergencies happen when dying will be a long process the time of death and when

grieving begins each decision point is introduced with a research summary and an extensive case example that describes disease processes health care delivery possibilities and the end of life dilemmas involved so as to apply across the varying cultural socio economic and spiritual contexts the case example is followed by a clinical commentary written by a palliative care specialist an ethical commentary written by an ethicist and three short essays written by religious thinkers of different traditions each situation is concluded by remarks on potential approaches that respect religious and spiritual beliefs values and practices at the end of life across all contexts and a bibliography the five decision points are bookended by an introductory section that explores broad historical and cultural perspectives and a conclusion section that summarizes the book and provides guidance for further reading and study the book draws on the work of the authors who have had direct experience with ethics committees and helping students comply with the requirements derek rosser shares true life post war time adventures as a reluctant recruit during his national service with the royal air force in topoi graphein christian abrahamsson maps the paradoxical limit of the in between to reveal that to be human is to know how to live with the difference between the known and the unknown using filmic case studies including code in connu lord of the flies and apocalypse now and focusing on key concerns developed in the works of the philosophers deleuze olsson and wittgenstein abrahamsson starts within the notion of fixed spatiality in which human thought and action are anchored in the given of identity he then moves through a social world in which spatiotemporal transformations are neither fixed nor taken for granted finally he edges into the pure temporality that lies beyond the maps of fixed points and social relations each chapter is organized into two subjects topoi or excerpts from the films and graphein the author's interpretation of presented theories to mirror the displacements transpositions juxtapositions fluctuations and transformations between delimited categories a landmark work in the study of human geography abrahamsson's book proposes that academic and intellectual attention should focus on the spatialization between meaning and its materialization in everyday life a bold and beautifully written exploration of the afterlife of god showing how apparently secular habits of mind in fact retain the structure of religious thought once in the west our lives were bounded by religion then we were guided out of the darkness of faith we are often told by the cold light of science and reason to be modern was to reject the religious for the secular and rational in a bold retelling of philosophical history michael rosen explains the limits of this story showing that many modern and apparently secular ways of seeing the world were in fact profoundly shaped by religion the key thinkers rosen argues were the german idealists as they sought to reconcile reason and religion it was central to kant s philosophy that if god is both just and assigns us to heaven or hell for eternity we must know what is required of us and be able to choose freely in trying to live moral lives kant argued we are engaged in a collective enterprise as members of a church invisible working together to achieve justice in history as later idealists moved away from kant s ideas about personal immortality this idea of historical immortality took center stage through social projects that outlive us we maintain a kind of presence after death conceptions of historical immortality moved not just into the universalistic ideologies of liberalism and revolutionary socialism but into nationalist and racist doctrines that opposed them but how after global wars and genocide can we retain faith in any conception of shared moral progress and if not what is to become of the idea of historical immortality that is our present predicament a seamless blend of philosophy and intellectual history the shadow of god is a profound exploration of secular modernity s theistic inheritance from the 11th century ad east asian armies made increasing use of exploding missiles and siege cannon to reduce the fortifications of their enemies some of these weapons were very similar to those used in europe for example the heavy siege cannon used in the siege of p yongyang during the japanese invasion in the late 16th century others like the korean hwach a carts mounting over a hundred rockets that were used to bombard the japanese at haengiu in 1593 were very different from their european contemporaries this book details the design and use of the wide range of weaponry available during this period through time people have lived with darkness archaeology shows us that over the whole human journey people have sought out dark places for burials for votive deposition and sometimes for retreat or religious ritual away from the wider community thirteen papers explore palaeolithic use of deep caves in europe and the orientation of mortuary monuments in the neolithic and bronze age it examines how the senses are affected in caves and monuments that were used for ritual activities from bronze age miners in wales working in dangerous subterranean settings to initiations in Italian caves to a modern caver's experience of spending time in the one of the world's deepest caves in Russia we see how darkness was and is viewed at northern latitudes where parts of the year are spent in eternal night and in Easter Island where darkness provided communal refuge from the pervasive sun we know that spending extended periods in darkness and silence can affect one physically emotionally and spiritually how did interactions between people and darkness affect individuals in the past and how were they regarded by their communities and how did this interaction transform places in the landscape as the ever increasing electrification of the planet steadily minimizes the amount of darkness in our lives curiously darkness is coming more into focus this first collection of papers on the subject begins a conversation about the role of darkness in human experience through time selected and introduced by Juli Carson this book presents a collection of essential essays interviews and never before published archival materials that trace the development of the teaching of major artist and thinker Mary Kelly from 1980-2017 as an artist and a theorist Kelly is known for her foundational contributions to feminism and conceptual art she is also revered for her innovative pedagogy which has influenced countless artists writers and teachers within the international art community her description of a feminist practice of concentric pedagogy centred on the artwork rather than the mastery of the teacher radically changed teaching practice in art studios detailing Kelly's innovative pedagogical program the essays are split into three sections the method which focuses on Kelly's renowned method of ethical observation within studio critique the project which explores her notion of what constitutes an artistic project and project and method in the field which presents for the first time a transcription of the passage of a few people through a rather brief period of time a performative colloquy commissioned by the Tate Modern and moderated by Kelly in 2015 following this transcription is a portfolio of practicing artists previously enrolled in Kelly's interdisciplinary studio area at UCLA Mary Kelly's concentric pedagogy highlights how contemporary studio teaching practice has been largely informed by Kelly's bold and innovative approach to art pedagogy evidencing how the intersection of teaching artistic practice and radical political engagement can transform our approach to all three it is essential reading for students and teachers of art and design studio practice art history and theory contemporary and feminist art ever since your schooling began mirrors and reverses the traditional rites of passage by which a child became an adult timpte suggests that jesus by insisting that one must enter the kingdom of god as a child invokes two interlacing images first to enter the kingdom of god one must be fundamentally transformed and changed second this transformation reverses the rite by which a child would have become an adult removing the adult s superior status beginning with a summary of the scholarship surrounding children in the bible timpte explores the perception of children in the ancient world their rites of passage and entrance into adulthood and contrasting this with the processing of entering the kingdom of god while also highlighting childish characters in mark timpte concludes that to enter into the kingdom as a child means that one must strip off those things one gained by leaving childhood behind wealth respect family much like jesus who throughout mark s gospel moves from powerful to powerless respected to despised and accepted by all to rejected even seemingly by god jesus models transformation to childhood in an emphasis on what the kingdom of god is like while the great war raged across the trench lined battlefields of europe a hidden conflict took place in the distant hinterlands of the turbulent mexican republic german officials and secret service operatives plotted to bring war to the united states through an array of schemes and strategies from training a german mexican army for a cross border invasion to dispatching saboteurs to disrupt american industry and planning for submarine bases on the western coast of Mexico Bill Mills tells the true story of the most audacious of these operations the German plot to launch clandestine sea raiders from the Mexican port of Mazatlán to disrupt allied merchant shipping in the Pacific the scheme led to a desperate struggle between German and American secret agents in Mexico German Consul Fritz Unger the director of a powerful trading house plotted to obtain a salvaged Mexican gunboat to supply U-boats operating off Mexico and to seize a hapless tramp schooner to help hunt allied merchantmen Unger's efforts were opposed by a colorful array of individuals including a trusted member of the German secret service in Mexico who was also the top American spy the U.S. State Department's senior officer in Mazatlán the hard-charging commander of a Navy gunboat and a draft-dodging American informant in the enemy camp full of drama and intrigue Treacherous Passage is the first complete account of the daring German attempts to raid allied shipping from Mexico in 1918 purchase the audio edition

a sweeping account of three Gujarati Muslim trading communities whose commercial success over nearly two centuries sheds new light on the history of capitalism, Islam, and empire in South Asia during the nineteenth century three Gujarati Muslim commercial castes the Bohras, Khojas, and Memons came to dominate Muslim business in South Asia although these communities constitute less than 1 percent of South Asia's Muslim population they are still disproportionately represented among the region's leading Muslim-owned firms today in No Birds of Passage Michael O'Sullivan argues that the conditions enabling their success have never been understood thanks to stereotypes embraced equally by colonial administrators and Muslim commentators that estrange them from their religious identity yet while long viewed as Hindus in all but name or as Westernized Muslims who embraced colonial institutions these groups in fact entwined economic prerogatives and religious belief in a distinctive form of Muslim capitalism following entrepreneurial firms from Gujarat to the Hijaz, Hong Kong, Mombasa, Rangoon, and beyond O'Sullivan reveals the importance of kinship networks private property and religious obligation to their business endeavors this paradigm of muslim capitalism found its highest expression in the jamaats the central caste institutions of each community which combined south asian islamicate and european traditions of corporate life the jamaats also played an essential role in negotiating the position of all three groups in relation to british authorities and indian muslim nationalists as well as the often sharp divisions within the castes themselves o sullivan s account sheds light on gujarati muslim economic life from the dawn of colonial hegemony in india to the crisis of the postcolonial state and provides fascinating insights into the broader effects of capitalist enterprise on muslim experience in modern south asia on the 20th of january 1526 the santiago left lisbon bound for africa with a cargo of brass and tin bracelets round bells barber basins and cloth by early october the ship was back in portugal with a very different cargo 108 enslaved africans with chilling detachment the ship s trading log records the commodification of human beings the prices paid for them the sums received for their sale and the number who did not survive the crossing whilst this log may be extremely rare it is clear from another surviving document the receipt book of the customs office of the portuguese cape verde islands that such voyages were commonplace in the early years of the sixteenth century the bulk of this volume consists of a translation into english of the receipt book from the customs office of the cape verde islands in it portuguese customs agents recorded import duties on over 3 000 slaves transported from nearby west africa in 36 ships the customs officers named the slave traders ships officers crew and outfitters of the ships as well as the price of each slave and the import duty collected by the portuguese government and the catholic church a second section of the customs book provides details of export taxes paid on c 600 african slaves by merchants from portugal spain and the spanish canary islands when they exchanged european merchandise for slaves the final chapter of the volume translates the santiago s log providing an example of an actual slave trading expedition taken together these documents open a rare window into the workings and scope of the early atlantic slave trade a bold and beautifully written exploration of the afterlife of god showing how apparently secular habits of mind in fact retain the structure of religious thought once in the west our lives were bounded by religion then we were guided out of the darkness of faith we are often told by the cold light of science and reason to be modern was to reject the religious for the secular and rational in a bold retelling of philosophical history michael rosen explains the limits of this story showing that many modern and apparently secular ways of seeing the world were in fact profoundly shaped by religion the key thinkers rosen argues were the german idealists as they sought to reconcile reason and religion it was central to kant s philosophy that if god is both just and assigns us to heaven or hell for eternity we must know what is required of us and be able to choose freely in trying to live moral lives kant argued we are engaged in a collective enterprise as members of a church invisible working together to achieve justice in history as later idealists moved away from Kant's ideas about personal immortality this idea of historical immortality took center stage through social projects that outlive us we maintain a kind of presence after death conceptions of historical immortality moved not just into the universalistic ideologies of liberalism and revolutionary socialism but into nationalist and racist doctrines that opposed them but how after global wars and genocide can we retain faith in any conception of shared moral progress and if not what is to become of the idea of historical immortality that is our present predicament a seamless blend of philosophy and intellectual history the shadow of god is a profound exploration of secular modernity's theistic inheritance through time people have lived with darkness archaeology shows us that over the whole human journey people have sought out dark places for burials for votive deposition and sometimes for retreat or religious ritual away from the wider community thirteen papers explore palaeolithic use of deep caves in Europe and the orientation of mortuary monuments in the Neolithic and Bronze Age it examines how the senses are affected in caves and monuments that were used for ritual activities from bronze age miners in wales working in dangerous subterranean settings to initiands in italian caves to a modern caver s experience of spending time in the one of the world s deepest caves in russia we see how darkness was and is viewed at northern latitudes where parts of the year are spent in eternal night and in easter island where darkness provided communal refuge from the pervasive sun we know that spending extended periods in darkness and silence can affect one physically emotionally and spiritually how did interactions between people and darkness affect individuals in the past and how were regarded by their communities and how did this interaction transform places in the landscape as the ever increasing electrification of the planet steadily minimizes the amount of darkness in our lives curiously darkness is coming more into focus this first collection of papers on the subject begins a conversation about the role of darkness in human experience through time with in search of monsters to destroy christopher coyne offers readers a crisp concise and devastating indictment of american imperialism his provocative proposal for a nonviolent polycentric approach to national security comes as a welcome bonus andrew j bacevich president and chairman of the board quincy institute for responsible statecraft professor emeritus of international relations and history boston university imperialism and militarism build empires not liberalism so says christopher coyne senior fellow at the independent institute and professor of economics at george mason university in this eye opening must read book on america s recent foreign policy failures after 9 11 the united states tried to establish liberal political regimes in the middle east and in the mountains of afghanistan but the effort according to coyne was doomed to fail and his logic is simple illiberal means such as industrial scale violence the destruction of international norms and partnerships with brutal oppressive regimes can lead only to illiberal ends what else are the hundreds of thousands of dead and mutilated civilians the us left behind in the middle east and central asia what else are the destroyed ancient cultures and nearly obliterated nation states coyne also points out that the illiberal perpetrators can end up nearly bankrupt and humiliated in the process and profoundly less secure sound familiar coyne insists that if we do not absorb these truths the rest of the 21st century will be a repeat of its bloodstained unstable beginning but coyne is no isolationist he insists there are workable proven alternatives to imperialism militarism and empire ones that preserve freedom promote security and foster mutually enriching friendship among the nations of the earth these alternatives stand in stark and admirable opposition to our current militaristic culture proving that nonviolent approaches to domestic and international conflicts not only minimize violence but also promote cultures of peace throughout the world read in search of monsters to destroy and you ll never look at the nation state or international relations the same again katherine joy kihlstrom timpte addresses a gap in scholarship by answering the question how is a child supposed to be the model recipient of the kingdom of god while most scholarship on mark 10 13 16 agrees that children are metaphorically employed because of their qualities of dependence timpte argues that it is more specifically an image of the disciple s radical transformation which both mirrors and reverses the traditional rites of passage by which a child became an adult timpte suggests that jesus by insisting that one must enter the kingdom of god as a child invokes two interlacing images first to enter the kingdom of god one must be fundamentally transformed and changed second this transformation reverses the rite by which a child would have become an adult removing the adult's superior status beginning with a summary of the scholarship surrounding children in the bible. Timpté explores the perception of children in the ancient world, their rites of passage and entrance into adulthood, and contrasting this with the processing of entering the kingdom of God while also highlighting childish characters in Mark. Timpté concludes that to enter into the kingdom as a child means that one must strip off those things one gained by leaving childhood behind: wealth, respect, family, much like Jesus who throughout Mark's Gospel moves from powerful to powerless, respected to despised, and accepted by all to rejected, even seemingly by God. Jesus models transformation to childhood in an emphasis on what the kingdom of God is like.
