European memory institutions are repositories of a wealth of rare documents that record public domain content. These documents are often stored in dark archives to which members of the public are granted limited access, resulting in the public domain content recorded therein being relegated to a form of forgotten knowledge. Digitisation offers a means by which such public domain content can be made speedily and easily accessible to users around the world. For this reason, it has been hailed as the harbinger of a new digital renaissance. This book examines the topical issue of the need to preserve exclusivity over digitised versions of rare documents recording public domain content based on data gathered through an empirical survey of digitisation projects undertaken by fourteen memory institutions in five European Union member states. It argues for the introduction of exclusive rights in digitised versions of rare documents recording public domain textual content as a means of incentivising private sector investment in the digitisation process. It concludes by presenting a detailed proposal for a European Union regulation that would grant memory institutions a limited term related right in digitised versions of rare documents held in their collections, subject to stringent exceptions and limitations that are designed to safeguard user interests.

in his histories herodotus of halicarnassus gave an account of xerxes invasion of greece 480 bce among the information in this work features a rich topography of the places visited by the army as well as of the battlefields apparently there existed a certain demand among the greeks to behold the exact places where they believed that the greeks had fallen gods had appeared or xerxes had watched over his men this book argues that herodotus topography long taken at face value as if it provided unambiguous access to the historical sites of the war may partly be a product of greek imagination in the approximately fifty years between the xerxes invasion and its publication with the landscape functioning as a catalyst this innovative approach leads to a new understanding of the topography of the invasion and of the ways in which greeks in the late fifth century bce understood the world around them it also prompts new suggestions about the
