in ghosts of 45 geoffrey e hill addresses the great questions revolving around japans past militarismhow did it get started why were they so aggressive why were individuals submissive to authority what was the reason japanese felt superior was american bombing and the atomic bombs really justified why are the japanese reluctant to recognize their militaristic past and what can the japanese do to emerge from this predominantly negative war legacy after world war ii the japanese people rebuilt their country established a new government restored their infrastructure and became a pacifist nation despite these profound changes modern japan has not been able to achieve a desired national purpose and a leadership standing in the international community in ghosts of 45 hill examines this problem by exploring the roots and evolution of japans militaristic period through historical sources and the recollections of people living in wartime japan he features in depth interviews with both well educated japanese individuals familiar with western culture and american pows subjected to forced labor three narratives are brought together that could help guide japan toward finding renewed national purpose and international respect the roots of japans militarism the ongoing war legacy and key principles concerning the status of the emperor and public education about wartime japan in addition hill discusses comparisons between the emperor and the pope the samurai code and the code of the english knights during the middle ages and the beliefs that allowed japanese wartime brutality and american slavery
