professor shepperson says of this regional economic history of east central africa that it is a refreshing combination of a scholarly survey of a relatively new field of african history and of a contribution to an important controversy on african underdevelopment alpers has written a history of the penetration and changing character of international trade in east central africa from the fifteenth to the later nineteenth century his study focuses on a vast and little known region that includes southern tanzania northern mozambique and malawi with extension north along the swahili coast and west as far as the lunda state of the mwata kazembe he examines both the competition between traders and their internal impact on the various societies of east central africa alpers main concern is to demonstrate that the historical roots of underdevelopment in the area are to be found in the system of international trade which was initiated by arabs in the fifteenth century seized and extended by the portuguese in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries dominated by a complex mixture of indian arab and western capitalisms in the nineteenth century thus this readable and original book places east african trading systems within the larger western indian ocean system and in the world capitalist system this title is part of uc press s voices revived program which commemorates university of california press s mission to seek out and cultivate the brightest minds and give them voice reach and impact drawing on a backlist dating to 1893 voices revived makes high quality peer reviewed scholarship accessible once again using print on demand technology this title was originally published in 1975

in this work neils steensgaard combines an analytical economic approach with detailed historic scholarship to provide an imaginative and important analysis of a central incident in modern world history the event is the breaking of the portuguese monopoly on asian trade in the seventeenth century by english and dutch mercantile interests this change the author demonstrates was not simply the triumph of the new powers over the old rather the dutch english victory heralded a structural change in international trade the triumph of entrepreneurial capitalism over the older steensgaard s study is divided into two major parts the first examines the economic and political structure of the seventeenth century institutions in the near east portugal england and the netherlands the author demonstrates that the rise to preeminence of the english and dutch east india companies over the portuguese state of india was the result of the superior economic and bureaucratic organization of the former the eclipse of portuguese power in general the author argues is best understood as an institutional failure an inability to adapt to changing patterns and demands of economic life the second part of professor steensgaard s study provides a detailed historical account of an important event in the fall of the portuguese trading empire the loss of the city of hormuz in 1622 hormuz located at a strategic point at the entrance of the persian gulf was a central port city on the asian trade route it fell to an english and persian force the author demonstrates why this event exemplifies the portuguese institutional weaknesses that are discussed in the first part of the book the study of regionalism is essential as it has become a vital trend with profound regional and global impacts japan korea and china are regarded as the key actors for such action in east asia while regionalization has created building blocks for economic integration the act of exclusion from regionalism will only lead to marginalization therefore it is important to learn how to make it work this book analyzes the effect of china japan and korea s trade strategy on asean countries as closer economic ties between countries in the area have expanded significantly in the last decade economic regionalization in east asia has proceeded in a much more dynamic fashion than regionalist projects hastiadi argues that regionalism in the form of regional trade agreements rtas is better than the present regionalization as it promotes for centuries east africa has played a central role within the indian ocean world the arabs built the first trade networks there these were laid siege to by the portuguese in the sixteenth century followed by british colonialists in the nineteenth century an interregional trade linked different subregions of east africa to other indian ocean economies for example hindu merchants from gujarat played a leading role in the ivory trade of east africa during the past four centuries in the nineteenth century zanzibar became a major center of the asian slave trade while slave trading slave raiding and their consequences provide one thematic focus of this book the author also demonstrates that indian ocean commercial networks were much more complex in the range of products exchanged including luxury goods and staple food items as well as enforced labor islam provided yet another connective tissue linking east africa to the indian ocean world and served as a cultural matrix through which popular beliefs and practices were transmitted this book offers an eye opening there has been a proliferation of proposals for bilateral free trade areas in east asia in recent times these initiatives fly in the face of the long standing support of key players in the region such as japan for the mfn based non discriminatory trading system and the commitment to non discriminatory trade liberalisation and reform within apec as china establishes its role in the wto its interests are very much in an open global trading system the paper argues that the core interests of east asian economies remain in non discriminatory global trading arrangements and prosecuting those interests within the doha round of trade negotiations it suggests that a way forward in sorting out the trade

would be for east asian economies to take a lead in negotiations on strengthening wto rules on preferential trade arrangements in terms of global economic welfare the only good preferential arrangement is one that disappears in time the paper makes specific recommendations for re vamping the rule on preferential trade arrangements with that objective in mind p 1
