atf transmission fluid is a lubricant that is used to reduce friction and wear between the moving parts of a transmission. It also helps to cool the transmission and prevent overheating. ATF is a complex mixture of base oil, additives, and other components. The most common type of ATF is automatic transmission fluid (ATF). ATF is used in automatic transmissions, while manual transmission fluid (MTF) is used in manual transmissions. ATF is also used in some types of power steering systems and hydraulic systems. ATF is a critical component of a vehicle's drivetrain and should be checked and changed regularly. ATF is a complex mixture of base oil, additives, and other components.
