traditional accounts of the scottish enlightenment present the half century or so before 1750 as at best a not yet fully realised precursor to the era of hume and smith at worst a period of superstition and religious bigotry this is the first book length study to systematically challenge that notion instead it argues that the era between approximately 1680 and 1745 was a first scottish enlightenment part of the continent wide phenomenon of early enlightenment and led by the jacobites episcopalian and catholics of north eastern scotland it makes this argument through an intensive study of the dramatic changes in historiographical practice which took place in scotland during this era showing how the documentary scholarship of jean mabillon and the maurists was eagerly received and rapidly developed in scottish historical circles resulting in the wholesale demolition of the older humanist myths of scottish origins and their replacement with the foundations of our modern understanding of early scottish history this volume accordingly challenges many of the truisms surrounding seventeenth and eighteenth century scottish history pushing back against notions of pre enlightenment scotland as backward insular and intellectually impoverished and mapping a richly polymathic erudite and transnational web of scholars readers and polemicists public academic prize contests the concours académique played a significant role in the intellectual life of enlightenment france with aspirants formulating positions on such matters as slavery poverty the education of women tax reform and urban renewal and submitting the resulting essays for scrutiny by panels of judges in the enlightenment in practice jeremy l caradonna draws on archives both in paris and the provinces to show that thousands of individuals ranging from elite men and women of letters artisans and peasants participated in these intellectual competitions a far broader range of people than has been previously assumed caradonna contends that the enlightenment in france can no longer be seen as a cultural movement restricted to a small coterie of philosophers or a limited number of printed texts moreover caradonna demonstrates that the french monarchy took academic competitions quite seriously sponsoring numerous contests on such practical matters as deforestation the quality of drinking water and the nighttime illumination of cities in some cases the contests served as an early mechanism for technology transfer the state used submissions to identify technical experts to whom it could turn for advice finally the author shows how this unique intellectual exercise declined during the upheavals of the french revolution when voicing moderate public criticism became a rather dangerous act
