over the past two decades there have been a number of important developments in the areas of liability property and life and health insurance that have significantly changed insurance law accordingly the fourth edition of principles of insurance law has been substantially rewritten reformatted and refocused in order to offer the insurance law student and practitioner a broad perspective of both traditional insurance law concepts and cutting edge legal issues affecting contemporary insurance law theory and practice this edition not only expands the scope of topical coverage but also segments the law of insurance in a manner more amenable to study as well as facilitating the recombination and reordering of the chapters as desired by individual instructors the fourth edition of principles of insurance law includes new and expanded treatment of important insurance law developments including the critical role of insurance binders as temporary forms of insurance as illustrated in the world trade center property insurance disputes resulting from the terrorist attacks of september 11 2001 the continuing debate between legal formalists and legal functionalists for the heart and soul of insurance contract law what constitutes a policyholder's reasonable expectation regarding coverage the current property and liability insurance crisis risk management and self insurance issues emerging and frequently conflicting case law concerning the intersection of insurance law and federal anti discrimination regulation ongoing interpretive battles over the preemptive scope of erisa the united states supreme court ruling that a california statute attempting to leverage european insurers into honoring commitments to holocaust era policies is preempted by the executive's power over foreign affairs the state farm v campbell decision which struck down a 145 million punitive damages award in an insurance bad faith claim as well as setting more restrictive parameters for the recovery of punitive damages new issues over the dividing line between tangible property typically covered under a property insurance policy and intangible property which is typically excluded an issue of increasing importance in the digital and cyber age refinement of liability insurance law regarding trigger of coverage duty to defend reimbursement of defense costs and apportionment of insurer and policyholder responsibility for liability payments the difficult to harmonize decisions concerning when a loss arises out of the use of an automobile insurer bad faith and the availability if any of actions against a policyholder for reverse bad faith and the degree to which excess insurance and reinsurance may be subject to modified approaches to insurance policy construction the teacher's manual highlights the differences between the third edition and the fourth edition in addition it includes case brief summaries of the major cases excerpted in the book authors analyses of the notes questions and problems that follow the principal cases and offers alternative syllabuses for planning purposes this book also is available in a three hole punched alternative loose leaf version printed on 8 5 x 11 inch paper with wider margins and with the same pagination as the hardbound book this 4th edition generally follows the structure of earlier editions which has been found to be efficient after a short history of the subject it analyses the basic principles of insurance law insofar as it has been found relevant to this form of cover this is followed by an intensive study of the principle of construction of commercial particularly insurance contracts and of statutory interpretation next is a study of the doctrine of utmost good faith generally but with particular reference to liability insurance followed by a chapter relating to the proposal with emphasis on the law relating to fair trading the work then turns to the policy first a policy of interim insurance and then to the nature scope and purpose of a liability insurance policy with particular attention to detailed issues that generally arise in respect of this form of cover it is followed by an analysis of conditions and exclusions both generally and in respect of all the particular clauses usually found in such policies the work then becomes more specific in its attention to the many particular sub species of liability insurance and their specialised terms and conditions on this foundation there is then an investigation of the effect of general principles of equity and the like such as election waiver estoppel res judicata and privity of contract finally a chapter is devoted to substantive issues and those of practice and procedure which are abundantly found in litigation between the various parties who are engaged directly or indirectly in disputes related to this form of insurance topics include such matters as direct action by a claimant against an alleged wrongdoer s insurer subrogation and a claim between co insurers of a common insured for contribution in respect of indemnity provided by one of them features the former structure has been somewhat revised for greater convenience to the reader but the major change from the former edition lies in the updating of case law in respect of important refined detail where that has been the subject of further judicial attention and the inclusion of commentary on it this does not involve expansive theoretical discussion but rather constitutes a focused exegesis with reference to the authority and a short practical explanation of the more persuasive reasoning involved related titles madden mcilwraith madden australian medical liability 4th edition pynt australian insurance law a first reference 4th edition dal pont law of limitation 2nd edition

Principles of Insurance Law

Insurance is a concept, a technique, and an economic institution. It is a major tool of risk management and plays an important role in the economic, social, and political life of all countries. Economic growth throughout the world has even expanded the role of insurance. Theory and practice of insurance aims to describe the significance of insurance institutions, the reasons they exist, and how they function. The author emphasizes fundamental principles in risk and insurance using an international frame of reference. This volume begins with an introduction to the concept of risk, then proceeds to cover insurance and its relationship to the economy, the principles of risk management and insurance, and the characteristics and performance of insurance companies.

the book examines how the absence of insurance in the past led to some special maritime liability law principles such as general average i.e. losses or expenses shared by all the parties to a maritime adventure and the limitation of shipowners liability in the absence of insurance these principles served the function of insurance mostly for shipowners as commercial marine insurance is now widely available these principles have lost their justification and may in fact interfere with the most important goal of liability law i.e. deterrence from negligence the work thus recommends their abolition it further argues that when insurance is easily available and affordable to the both parties to a liability claim the main goal of liability law should be deterrence as opposed to compensation this is exactly the case with the maritime cargo liability claims where both cargo owners and shipowners are invariably insured as a result the sole focus of cargo liability law should be and to a great extent is deterrence on the other hand in the vessel source oil pollution liability setting pollution victims are not usually insured therefore oil pollution liability law has to cater both for compensation and deterrence the two traditional goals of liability law the final question the work addresses is whether the deterrent effect of liability law is affected by the availability of liability insurance contrary to the popular belief the work attempts to prove that the presence of liability insurance is not necessarily a hindrance but can be a complementary force towards the realization of deterrent goal of liability law this historic book may have numerous typos and missing text purchasers can usually download a free scanned copy of the original book without typos from the publisher not indexed not illustrated 1922 edition excerpt insures a 50 000 property for 20 000 and company b insures the same property for 10 000 a loss of 3 000 occurs the above provision of the contract makes company a liable for the proportion that its insurance 20 000 bears to the total insurance 30 000 or two thirds of the loss appendix xxx lines 101 105 of 3 000 that is a liability of 2 000 company b is liable for the proportion its insurance 10 000 bears to the total insurance 30 000 or one third that is 1 000 where the policies issued by a and b are concurrent that is to say where the provisions of the policies are identical the application of the principle is simple but there are some cases where the policy provisions differ and it consequently becomes a difficult matter to determine the amount of the total insurance the policies may differ because the properties covered are in different locations because the descriptions of the insured articles vary because the interests covered are not identical or because one policy contains clauses or endorsements not on the other this is a situation to be avoided by both the insured and the company because it results in delay in the payment of losses and frequently involves complicated law cases the most frequent case of non concurrency is where one policy is a specific policy covering one item while another policy is a general policy covering many items including the one covered by the specific policy we will take a relatively simple case of this kind and apply to it a relatively simple rule as an illustration of the difficulties of adjustment let us suppose that an owner has a stock of goods consisting of the following value furniture
