what we know of the marked body in nineteenth century american literature and culture often begins with the scarlet letter s hester prynne and ends with moby dick s queequeg this study looks at the presence of marked men and women in a more challenging array of canonical and lesser known works including exploration narratives romances and frontier novels jennifer putzi shows how tattoos scars and brands can function both as stigma and as emblem of healing and survival thus blurring the borderline between the biological and social the corporeal and spiritual examining such texts as typee uncle tom s cabin captivity of the oatman girls the morgesons iola leroy and contending forces putzi relates the representation of the marked body to significant events beliefs or cultural shifts including tattooing and captivity romantic love the patriarchal family and abolition and slavery her particular focus is on both men and women of color as well as white women in other words bodies that did not signify personhood in the nineteenth century and thus by their very nature were grotesque complicating the discourse on agency power and identity these texts reveal a surprisingly complex array of representations of and responses to the marked body some that are a product of essentialist thinking about race and gender identities and some that complicate critique or even rebel against conventional thought
