the politics of sacred places is a study of the socio political dimensions of sacred sites in israel palestine drawing on over 20 years of in depth ethnographic research which introduces cutting edge theories on secularization struggles for recognition and diversity issues this book focuses on contemporary sacred sites and their socio political meanings for minorities within a hegemonic and a secularizing state system it argues that sacred places provide a space that is less scrutinized by the state and where alternative visions of the socio political may be produced a plethora of sites and case studies are examined including the rural shrine of maqam abu al hijja in the lower galilee the mosque of hassan bek in the heart of tel aviv jaffa and the most disputed sacred place in the region the haram al sharif in jerusalem these sites are explored through mostly a phenomenological lens and in various contexts from the individual body to the global this book offers a critical analytical study of the socio political aspects of sacred sites in contemporary societies within the broader understanding of scale and the spatial turn in the study of religion first published in 1977 to coincide with the hundredth anniversary of the signing of historical treaty seven by the first nations of southern alberta and the canadian government these mountains are our sacred places has become a classic of western canadian literature these mountains are our sacred places is a result of extensive research after consulting archival records and the stoney oral tradition chief john snow describes with clarity depth and understanding the native perspective on life since the birth of treaty seven in 1877 with compassion and detail snow describes the stable state of first nations prior to contact with europeans and the destruction wrought by the whisky traders he records the period of treaty signing and the failure on the government's part to hold to treaty agreements and most importantly snow explains his people's feeling of dispossession that continues to threaten the very survival of stoney beliefs values and lifestyle in his wisdom however snow is also optimistic about the hope that was born after the introduction of self government in 1969 following the granting of citizenship to indian people across the nation and about his people's belief in biculturalism as they seek a path that allows them to thrive and benefit from both native and non native cultures rather environment is not incidental or even subservient to mission rather it is a key player in the fulfillment and the communication of that mission the book begins with a working definition of the missional church underscoring the connection between god s mission missio dei and the church s mission the reader is presented with historical and theological frameworks for sacred space and reminded of the pivotal role of the built environment in the fulfillment of the mission of the church the design and construction of sacred spaces are shown to be fundamentally a theological exercise and not solely a matter of function pragmatics and fiscal astuteness the author questions the uncritical application of blanket statements such form must follow function and challenges the conviction that it does not matter where worship occurs only that it occurs the book addresses genuine concerns such as legitimizing the cost of church buildings and concludes with practical suggestions and essential questions that must be considered in posturing the built environment within the missional praxis of the church
