Reinventing Democracy 2024-05-28 kauders call for a written constitution and a federal association is not just relevant to the united kingdom but holds lessons for any nation grappling with democratic challenges reinventing democracy is an important catalyst for discussion and a rallying cry for a more accountable and responsive political system the london economic a powerful persuasive and timely wake up call for transforming the uk into a federal state a must read richard moriarty the sun a compelling and clear pathway out of britain s failing political morass towards a brighter truly democratic future the european 90 of electors want political reform but how to escape the mess britain should adopt a federal structure with a written constitution and an elected apolitical people s council replacing autocratic and ineffective bodies growing concern about the relative economic deterioration of the united kingdom led to realisation that the system of political governance is probably an unrecognised cause of british decline events over the last few years have provided a fertile supply of examples all that was needed was some original thought but nobody seemed to be facing facts at the centre of these ideas lie four major concepts 1 the people s council to replace the privy council house of lords and some scrutiny functions of the present house of commons 2 a federal structure with sovereignty defined as sovereignty of the people of each nation instead of the crown in parliament 3 representation in united kingdom wide bodies to be determined according to the fibonacci series so that england can be outvoted by scotland wales and northern ireland combined thereby preventing england treating the other nations as colonies 4 the book includes a draft written constitution the oldest democracy is now an obsolete model long overdue for replacement
