web 2.0 is a term that has become a household name in the technology world. It refers to the second generation of the World Wide Web, which is characterized by user-generated content, social networking, and collaborative computing. The term was coined by Ogburn and Reich in their book "Web 2.0: The Power of End Users" in 2004. The book describes how the web has evolved from a static collection of documents to a dynamic, interactive platform where users can create and share content. This has led to the rise of social media, video sharing, and other user-driven applications. The book also discusses the challenges of managing and securing this new type of content and the potential for a more open and decentralized web.
