a critic takes issue with the art world's romanticizing of networks and participatory projects linking them to the values of a globalized neoliberal economy over the past twenty years the network has come to dominate the art world affecting not just interaction among art professionals but the very makeup of the art object itself the hierarchical and restrictive structure of the museum has been replaced by temporary projects scattered across the globe staffed by free agents hired on short term contracts viewed by spectators defined by their predisposition to participate and make connections in this book lane relyea tries to make sense of these changes describing a general organizational shift in the art world that affects not only material infrastructures but also conceptual categories and the construction of meaning examining art practice exhibition strategies art criticism and graduate education relyea aligns the transformation of the art world with the advent of globalization and the neoliberal economy he analyzes the new networked participatory art world hailed by some as inherently democratic in terms of the pressures of part time temp work in a service economy the calculated stockpiling of business contacts and the anxious duty of being a team player at work relyea calls attention to certain networked forms of art including relational aesthetics multiple or fictive artist identities and bricolaged objects that can be seen to oppose the values of neoliberalism rather than romanticizing and idealizing them relyea offers a powerful answer to the claim that the interlocking functions of the network each act of communicating or connecting or practice are without political content you don't have to be an artist to achieve great results on your ipad and
