the spirit of capitalism answers a fundamental question of economics a question neither economists nor economic historians have been able to answer what are the reasons rather than just the conditions for sustained economic growth taking her title from max weber s famous study on the same subject liah greenfeld focuses on the problem of motivation behind the epochal change in behavior which from the sixteenth century on has reoriented one economy after another from subsistence to profit transforming the nature of economic activity a detailed analysis of the development of economic consciousness in england the netherlands france germany japan and the united states allows her to argue that the motivation or spirit behind the modern growth oriented economy was not the liberation of the rational economic actor but rather nationalism nationalism committed masses of people to an endless race for national prestige and thus brought into being the phenomenon of economic competitiveness nowhere has economic activity been further removed from the rational calculation of costs than in the united states where the economy has come to be perceived as the end all of political life and the determinant of all social progress american economic civilization spurs the nation on to ever greater economic achievement but it turns americans into workaholics unsure of the purpose of their pursuits and leads american statesmen to exaggerate the weight of economic concerns in foreign policy often to the detriment of american political influence and the confusion of the rest of the world provocative to observers of contemporary capitalism as to historians of early modern europe or western political thought

Sovereign Individuals of Capitalism (RLE Social Theory)

2014-08-21

in this sequel to their acclaimed the dominant ideology thesis the authors develop their analysis of the social and cultural underpinnings of modern capitalism they confront a central assumption of western culture namely that the individual is sovereign and that capitalism above all other economic forms depends on individualism these ideas have an unbroken history from alexis de toqueville to milton friedman the paradox of the modern world is that the moral emphasis on the individual is contradicted by the actual organization of economy and society the authors suggest that individualism and capitalism have no enduring or necessary relationship their linkage is entirely accidental and was confined to one particular historical period in the west against the background of what they term the discovery of the individual the authors show how individualism gave capitalism a particular shape and capitalism in turn highlighted the possessive features of the individual oriental capitalism and late capitalism in the west bear no particular relationship to individualism indeed they flourish best in the absence of individualistic culture collectivism increasingly dominates both economic and social life these issues once informed the sociological enterprise but have not been systematically addressed in recent times this book revives the classical tradition of the historical and comparative analysis of culture and economy in capitalist society in the context of the late twentieth century world
