address them the palpable struggle to better understand the health risks facing a globalized world and to strengthen collective action to deal with them effectively begins they argue with a more reflexive and critical approach to this rapidly emerging subject for many reasons this decade is a time of rethinking many things there is the impending turn of the millenium an event packed with meaning there is recent political history which has changed the global structure of power in ways few could foresee and there is an economic fluidity worldwide that makes every day unpredictable and the future uncertain there are movements of people and surges of violence that seem unparalleled and well may be we are awash in change and people everywhere are trying to understand that and read its implications it is a time that provokes soul searching backward into the lessons and achievements of the past and forward into ways for the future to be better the fields of health and social development are no exception more specifically events and conditions in the health sector point to the need to rethink some large issues nations everywhere are grappling with the economic and ethical dilemmas of achieving and maintaining healthy populations since these are both cause and consequence of true development increasingly the thinking is global because there are comparisons to be learned from connections that have implications obligations to fulfill and costs that are somehow shared as part of this dynamic there has been an explosion of analytic documents published since the start of this decade that deal mainly though not exclusively with health in developing countries the purpose of global health in transition is to distill the essential elements from those efforts discuss the major ideas they share and the thoughts they prompt ask what those might mean for a next agenda in global health and comment on the shifting context in which our current concepts of the ideal will prove or not prove their adequacy for the future dr oliver wendell holmes was once asked when should the training of a child commence a hundred years before birth was the reply indeed it is this perspective on life through posterity that underlies the maturing field of international health embracing as it does a responsibility for and an awareness of the needs of all peoples the concepts of international health are increasingly revitalizing modern medicine as it attempts to relieve mankind of the burden of disease curative medicine once the paradigm took a relatively beneficent approach to treatment but epidemiological recognition of the frequency of disease on a global basis and an appreciation of the vast number of those afflicted evoked a humiliating backlash of awareness that curative medicine alone neither constrains disease nor permanently advances human health happiness or longevity the growing reliance on truly international health strategies by national and international agencies including the more definite and extended practice of preventive medicine has provided the means to achieve significant gains in the quality of health in years to come a redeeming feature of contemporary failures in science and medicine is that once intelligently studied analyzed and evaluated even these failed efforts may provide real insights that can mold our capacity and determination so it is that more than in any bygone age the past ten years have seen the implementation of a sound and systematic infrastructure for international health undertakings thus paving the way for improved health for all
