in identifying a number of fuzzy border cases notably where pensionable age pregnancy residence and marriage are proxies for unlawful discrimination equality discrimination and the law argues that the traditional notions of discrimination and victimisation are inadequate to implement equality policy and cannot represent fully the reality of discriminatory practices when mr and mrs james each aged

61 went swimming mr james was charged for entry while mrs james was admitted free the reason was that the local authority offered free swimming to those of pensionable age at the time 65 for men and 60 for women the house of lords found that mr james had suffered direct sex discrimination this majority plurality decision indicated that sometimes a given set of facts does not neatly accord to traditional definitions of discrimination this in turn encourages the judiciary to shape the law to fit the facts which results in an inconsistent body of law full of fuzzy borders starting with the james case this book investigates a number of fuzzy border cases in the eu and uk based on nationality discrimination notions of indirect discrimination pregnancy and sex discrimination marriage and sexual orientation discrimination perceived discrimination and victimisation the argument concludes that fixed notions such as direct and indirect discrimination are mutually exclusive do not stand up to scrutiny and that it must be recognised that the traditional concepts of discrimination and victimisation do not reflect the reality of practice this work is essential reading for students scholars and practitioners in all eu and english speaking jurisdictions particularly post graduates policy law makers and those on dedicated equality undergraduate courses this book presents a multidisciplinary assessment of the state of science in the use of systemic delivery technologies to deliver anti aging therapeutics now under development there is a gap between basic aging research and the development of intervention technologies this major obstacle must be overcome before biogerontological interventions can be put into clinical practice as biogerontology comes to understand aging as a systemic degenerative process it is clear that there is a pressing need for technologies that enable cells and tissues in a fully developed adult body to be manipulated systemically to combat aging the authors review advances in the chemistry and engineering of systemic delivery methods and analyze the strengths and limitations of each the book is organized into six sections the first offers an overview of the need for systemic delivery technologies alongside the development of anti aging therapies and describes approaches that will be required for studying the properties and efficiency of carriers for systemic delivery sections ii iii and iv describe recent advances in a range of strategies that may enable systemic delivery to help combat aging conditions ranging from cell senescence to decline in immune function and hormonal secretion section v discusses practical strategies to engineer and optimize the performance of delivery technologies for applications in systemic delivery along with their working principles the final section discusses technical and biological barriers that must be overcome as systemic delivery technologies move from research laboratory to clinical applications aimed at tackling aging and age associated diseases benefiting scholars students and a broader audience of interested readers the book includes helpful glossary sections in each chapter as well as sidebars that highlight important notes and questions for future research
