when in the winter they had had their supper and sat about the fire or when in the summer they lay on the border of the rock margined stream that ran through their little meadow close by the door of their cottage issuing from the far up whiteness often folded in clouds curdie s mother would not seldom lead the conversation to one peculiar personage said and believed to have been much concerned in the late issue of events that personage was the great great grandmother of the princess of whom the princess had often talked but whom neither curdie nor his mother had ever seen curdie could indeed remember although already it looked more like a dream than he could account for if it had really taken place how the princess had once led him up many stairs to what she called a beautiful room in the top of the tower where she went through all the what should he call it the behaviour of presenting him to her grandmother talking now to her and now to him while all the time he saw nothing but a bare garret a heap of musty straw a sunbeam and a withered apple lady he would have declared before the king himself young or old there was none except the princess herself who was certainly vexed that he could not see what she at least believed she saw as for his mother she had once seen long before curdie was born a certain mysterious light of the same description as one irene spoke of calling it her grandmother s moon and curdie himself had seen this same light shining from above the castle just as the king and princess were taking their leave since that time neither had seen or heard anything that could be supposed connected with her strangely enough however nobody had seen her go away if she was such an old lady she could hardly be supposed to have set out alone and on foot when all the house was asleep still away she must have gone for of course if she was so powerful she would always be about the princess to take care of her but as curdie grew older he doubted more and more whether irene had not been talking of some dream she had taken for reality he had heard it said that children could not always distinguish betwixt dreams and actual events at the same time there was his mother s testimony what was he to do with that his mother through whom he had learned everything could hardly be imagined by her own dutiful son to have mistaken a dream for a fact of the waking world when women were admitted to the royal academy schools in 1860 female art students gained a foothold in the most conservative art institution in england the royal female college of art the south kensington schools and the slade school of fine art also produced increasing numbers of women artists their entry into a male dominated art world altered the perspective of other artists and the public they came from disparate levels of society princess louise the fourth daughter of queen victoria studied sculpture at the national art training school yet they all shared ambition talent and courage analyzing their education and careers this book argues that the women who attended the art schools during the 1860s and 1870s including kate greenaway elizabeth butler helen allingham evelyn de morgan and henrietta rae produced work that would accommodate yet subtly challenge the orthodoxies of the fine art establishment without their contributions victorian art would be not simply the poorer but hardly recognizable to us today
