a lot hangs on the summative grades that students are given a good degree opens doors which otherwise might remain closed yet as higher education is now a mass rather than an elite system what is expected of its graduates is different from the expectations of previous generations students are expected not only to be able to demonstrate high standards of academic achievement but also a variety of capabilities that have at different times been given labels such as generic skills and transferable skills these abilities are difficult to grade for a variety of reasons and some graduates may be losing out because their particular strengths are given insufficient acknowledgement in current summative assessment practices using the uk honours degree classifications as a case study this book appraises the way in which summative assessment in higher education is approached and shows that the foundations of current practices in the uk and elsewhere are of questionable robustness it argues that there is a need to widen the assessment frame if the breadth of valued student achievements is to be recognised adequately co published with the association for state colleges and universities aascu which sponsored the project from which the book emerged this book answers the question what would your institution look like if students really mattered the authors argue that really putting student success at the center of attention will require a radical reimagining of higher education much of what is presented here is grounded in the findings of the american association of state colleges and universities aascu s re imagining the first year rfy initiative which brought together 44 member institutions over a three year period to identify and test programs strategies and tools aimed at improving retention rates for first year students the book makes a provocative set of arguments about what is possible if campuses radically reimagine their culture practices structures and rules with the primary purpose of helping students succeed in college and beyond universities in spite of the money spent on creating programs and services to help retain students until they achieve their academic and personal goals and graduate the figures have not improved over time this is particularly true for minority students who have a greater attrition rate than majority students demographic information shows that the minority population in the united states is growing at a faster rate than the majority it is imperative that educational institutions find ways to help improve retention rates for all students but particularly minority students retention rates should not differ appreciably among different racial ethnic groups the journal of college student retention research theory and practice is the only scholarly peer reviewed journal devoted solely to college student retention it has published many articles on minority student retention and this topic continues to garner much attention this book is a compilation of the very best of these articles selected on the basis of reviews by a cadre of experts in the education field the articles discuss african american latino latina asian and asian pacific native american and biracial students and institutional commitments to retaining a diverse student population for those interested in this vital area the collection will teach and inspire them to achieve greater heights and pay additional attention to retaining minority students in our colleges and universities why do students have different achievement levels across states is math achievement improving across states differences in average achievement levels across states are mainly traceable to differing family characteristics however students from similar families also score differently across states these differences are related to differences in resource levels and in how resources are spent states with high spending per pupil lower pupil teacher ratios higher participation in public prekindergarten and higher reported teacher resources have higher achievement disadvantaged children are the most sensitive to low resource and additional resources could substantially their scores between state rather than within state differences in resources appear to be the main reason for inequitable resource levels for students of lower socioeconomic status the conclusion is that significant math gains are occurring across most states that cannot be traced to resource changes that the rate of gain varies significantly by state and that reform efforts are the likely cause of these gains the results certainly challenge the traditional view of public education as unreformable
