Buxton, Iowa, was an unincorporated coal mining town established by Consolidation Coal Company in 1900 at a time when Jim Crow laws and segregation kept blacks and whites separated throughout the nation. Buxton was integrated; African American and Caucasian residents lived, worked, and went to school side by side. The company provided miners with equal housing and equal pay regardless of race and offered opportunities for African Americans beyond mining. Professional African Americans included a bank cashier, the justice of the peace, constables, doctors, attorneys, store clerks, and teachers. Businesses such as a meat market, a drugstore, a bakery a music store hotels millinery shops a saloon and restaurants were owned by african americans for 10 years african americans made up more than half of the population unfortunately in the early 1920s the mines closed and today only a cemetery a few foundations and some crumbling ruins remain this is a reproduction of the original artefact generally these books are created from careful scans of the original this allows us to preserve the book accurately and present it in the way the author intended since the original versions are generally quite old there may occasionally be certain imperfections within these reproductions we re happy to make these classics available again for future generations to enjoy this work has been selected by scholars as being culturally important and is part of the knowledge base of civilization as we know it this work was reproduced from the original artifact and remains as true to the original work as possible therefore you will see the original copyright references library stamps as most of these works have been housed in our most important libraries around the world and
