it is widely agreed that reducing poverty in africa south of the sahara ssa depends largely on stimulating growth in agriculture to this end heads of state in africa rallied to form the pan african comprehensive african agriculture development programme caadp with the goal of raising investments and improving strategy implementation however while implementing an agricultural agenda under the caadp framework more and more countries have realized that increasing public investment in agriculture alone is not enough policy can play an important role not only to make public investment more efficient but also is crucial for incentivizing private sector and farmer investment in agriculture against this backdrop this paper takes stock of current agricultural policies in ssa with a view to identifying policies that are working as well as areas for improvement the paper examines policies to encourage the adoption of agricultural inputs initiate greater private sector investment in agriculture and agro industries and manage price volatility while encouraging openness the paper further reviews successful land tenure policies and property rights systems reviews the evidence on the synergies between agriculture and nutrition and examines how caadp is laying the institutional architecture for improved policy formulation in africa in general the paper finds that although substantial progress has been made there is considerable scope for improvement this is not surprising given the relatively primitive and deeply rooted nature of smallholder farming in africa evidence synthesized in the paper supports the view that most policies cannot be implemented in isolation rather policies tend to be most effective when implemented along with complementary policies and public investments this paper presents a fear theory of the economy based on the interplay between fear of rare disasters and the interest rate on safe assets to do this i study the macroeconomic consequences of government administered interest rates in the neoclassical real business cycle model when the government has the power to fix the safe real interest rate the gap between the sticky real safe rate and the neutral rate can generate far reaching aggregate distortions when fear exogenously rises the demand for safe assets rise and the neutral rate falls if the central bank does not lower the safe rate by the same amount savings rise leading to a decline in consumption and aggregate demand the same mechanism works in reverse when fear falls quantitatively i show that a single fear factor can simultaneously i generate cross correlations in output labor consumption and investment consistent with the postwar us economy and ii generates variation in equity prices bond prices and a large risk premium in line with the asset pricing data six novel insights emerge from the model 1 actively regulating the safe interest rate in both directions can mitigate the fluctuations generated by fear cycles 2 recessions will be deeper and longer when central banks accept the zero lower bound and are unwilling to use negative rates 3 a commitment to use negative rates in recessions even if never implemented raises both the short and long run real neutral rates and moderates the business cycle 4 counter cyclical fiscal policy can act as disaster insurance and be expansionary by reducing fear 5 quantitative easing can be narrowly effective only when fear is high at the lower bound and 6 when fear is high especially at the lower bound policies that boost productivity also help fight recessions
