Gohar English Workbook 3 2008-08-07 in recent years postcolonial theories have emerged as one of the significant paradigms of contemporary academia affecting disciplines throughout the humanities and social sciences these theories address the complex processes of colonialism on culture and society with respect to both the colonizers and the colonized to help us understand the colonial experience in its entirety the contributors to archaeology and the postcolonial critique present critical syntheses of archaeological and postcolonial studies by examining both old and new world case studies and they ask what the ultimate effect of postcolonial theorizing will be on the practice of archaeology in the twenty first century

Archaeology and the Postcolonial Critique 2016-07-01 this essential handbook explores the relationship between the postcolonial critique and the field of archaeology a discipline that developed historically in conjunction with european colonialism and imperialism in aiding the movement to decolonize the profession the contributors to this volume themselves from six continents and many representing indigenous and minority communities and disadvantaged countries suggest strategies to strip archaeological theory and practice of its colonial heritage and create a discipline sensitive to its inherent inequalities summary articles review the emergence of the discipline of archaeology in conjunction with colonialism critique the colonial legacy evident in continuing archaeological practice around the world identify current trends and chart future directions in postcolonial archaeological research contributors provide a synthesis of research thought and practice on their topic the articles embrace multiple voices and case study approaches and have consciously aimed to recognize the utility of comparative work and interdisciplinary approaches to understanding the past this is a benchmark volume for the study of the contemporary politics practice and ethics of archaeology sponsored by the world archaeological congress

Issues in Applied Physics: 2011 Edition 2018 essay from the year 2015 in the subject english language and literature studies literature course engl 499 language english abstract this paper presents the subject of the class system in charles dickens novel oliver twist as compared to the social stratification in pakistan today the investigation centers on the settings and symbolism in the novel which uncovers the social stratification during the victorian age and traces the commonalities of class society between the victorians and contemporary pakistani society dickens showcases that poverty and vice are hereditary traits and the poor are inherently bad in conformity with the stereotypes of victorian britain albeit it is blatant in the novel that poverty and vice are fundamentally connected but the label of bad is supposedly attached with the poor the stereotypes in the victorian british society depicted by dickens in oliver twist are similar to the stereotypes upheld in modern day pakistan class differences in pakistan imply certain notions which are comparable to that of the victorian society portrayed in the novel the paper accentuates the theoretical framework of the marxist approach being applied on the primary text to underline the unquestionable proposition of colonialism of the british empire and class divisions as an outcome of this process based on the critical textual analysis of the novel i will assess the applicability of marxist idea of class stratification and my goal is to trace the commonalities in the social stratification and stereotypes of contemporary pakistan and victorian britain

Journal of Research (humanities). 2015-09-02 the idea that small loans can help poor families build businesses and exit poverty has blossomed into a global movement the concept has captured the public imagination drawn in billions of dollars reached millions of customers and garnered a nobel prize radical in its suggestion that the poor are creditworthy and conservative in its insistence on individual accountability the idea has expanded beyond credit into savings insurance and money transfers earning the name microfinance but is it the boon so many think it is readers of david roodman s openbook blog will immediately recognize his thorough straightforward and trenchant analysis due diligence written entirely in public with input from readers probes the truth about microfinance to guide governments foundations investors and private citizens who support financial services for poor people in particular it explains the need to deemphasize microcredit in favor of other financial services for the poor

Due Diligence 2019-01-15 we conduct a field experiment to test the demand for flexibility and for soft and hard commitment among clients of a microfinance institution we offer a commitment contract inspired by the rotating structure of a rosca additional treatments test ex ante demand for soft commitment in the form of reminders hard commitment in the form of a penalty for missing an installment and flexibility an option to postpone an installment our design is unique in the literature for allowing us to test using the same respondent population how demand for explicit commitment features differs between loan and savings contracts we find substantial demand for both credit and savings contracts but no demand for additional commitment features either in isolation or in combination in spite of their effectiveness in improving repayment in particular demand for savings is insensitive to explicit commitment features individuals offered loans actively dislike commitment and flexibility unless the latter is combined with reminders these findings complement a literature showing that commitment devices induce financial discipline they show that demand for commitment depends on whether commitment features are implicit or explicit

Financing Micro, Small, and Medium Enterprises 2020-08-02 this volume provides new insights into the distinctive contributions that community archaeology and heritage make to the decolonization of archaeological practice using innovative approaches the contributors explore important initiatives which have protected and revitalized local heritage initiatives that involved archaeologists as co producers rather than leaders these case studies underline the need completely reshape archaeological practice engaging local and indigenous communities in regular dialogue and recognizing their distinctive needs in order to break away from the top down power relationships that have previously characterized archaeology in africa community archaeology and heritage in africa reflects a determined effort to change how archaeology is taught to future generations through community based participatory approaches archaeologists and heritage professionals can benefit from shared resources and local knowledge and by sharing decision making with members of local communities archaeological inquiry can enhance their way of life ameliorate their human rights concerns and meet their daily needs to build better futures exchanging traditional power structures for research design and implementation the examples outlined in this volume demonstrate the discipline s exciting capacity to move forward to achieve its potential as a broader more accessible and more inclusive field

Supplementary Papers 2013-04-11 theoretical and empirical work on intra household decision making capture empowerment through bargaining weights given to individual preferences and infer such weights from household consumption allocations in this paper we test two key hypotheses underlying this work first that spousal influence is the same for all private consumption goods and second that women have pent up demand for pure agency we use data from a survey and a novel laboratory experiment implemented with adult couples in pakistan we find that women s influence on household decisions is decreasing in the importance of the decision we find no evidence that women have pent up demand for agency instead women are less willing to pay for agency when facing an unknown man we interpret this evidence as suggesting that women in our study population have internalized gender norms and that these norms regulate interactions between genders most strongly outside of the household we also find little evidence within our experimental setting that willingness to pay for agency is affected by the instrumental value of agency
