Collin's English Reference Library 1995-06-01 excerpt from books for a reference library being lectures on the books in the reference department of the free public library birmingham a necessity then arises from the very magnitude and completeness of the library that persons who have made certain branches of knowledge their special study should perform for you the very useful if homely office of a finger post to the contents of the catalogue of the library i wish that it had fallen to someone else's lot to commence these lectures by a subject seemingly more attractive than the subject of legal literature i say seemingly because i do not admit that any subject could be chosen of more real interest somebody must make a beginning and it seemed rather to devolve on the chair man of the committee to be first in the breach i do not know what course succeeding lecturers will take each will no doubt adopt the method most suitable to his subject it appears to me that the most practical course for me to take will be to suppose each one of you to be saying to me i want to know something about law what books in your library shall i read before answering that question let me mention that the books on law in the reference library have been selected on a principle and that principle is that they must not be only and solely technical books none of you should expect to find in the library books to teach you the special details of your various trades or occupations how to file a piece of metal or cut a garment so on the subject of law there is no book in the library which will tell you in detail how to defend yourself in a county court action that is technical detail and no more literature than a directory is literature the free libraries committee have very properly drawn the line here any book which relates to the general principles of law any book which connects law with history they have admitted but have excluded those purely technical books which are only the working tools of the lawyer allow me also before i answer the question a further explanation and that is that law is like language just as there are various languages as most of us know to our cost and there is in addition a science of language distinct from any and every particular language so in the law we have english law roman law and many other systems of law but there is a science of law totally distinct from any one system there however the analogy ceases for you may have a perfect knowledge of several languages without troubling yourself at all with the science of language so professional lawyers imbibe the necessary knowledge of the principles of law in solution as it were with the details of their daily practice but if you are beginning the study without the advantage of daily practice you must begin with some clear and definite ideas of what law is itself independent of whether it is roman law or english law about the publisher forgotten books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books find more at forgottenbooks.com this book is a reproduction of an important historical work forgotten books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy in rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition we do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are
