originally published in 1991 addressing the ways in which the ideology of gender and its social construction determine autobiographical self representations the essays here consider several women's works in the light of the social and historical conditions which enabled their production some examine diaries as a feminine form and ask about the ways in which thematic content such as childbirth can or cannot be represented in diaries and public discourse at different historical junctures others show the pressures of gender roles and how they have led to new genres in which self representation is often a refraction of the representation of others with the tools of gender theory the representation of hermaphroditism masculinity and male bodies is analysed and the ways in which gender intersects with racial sexual and class ideologies is also looked at in seeing autobiography as a form of agency in self construction thoreau as representative of their ages kuhn challenges the now entrenched thesis of the two cultures rather these three writers are exemplary in that their autobiographical and scientific writings may be read not as separate or even antithetical but as mutually constitutive projects that challenge the newly emerging boundaries between scientific and humanistic thought during the romantic period reading each writer s life stories and nature works side by side as they were written kuhn reveals the scientific character of autobiographical writing while demonstrating the autobiographical nature of natural science he considers all three writers in the context of scientific developments in their own times as well as ours showing how each one marks a distinctive stage in the growing estrangement of the arts and sciences from the self assured epistemic unity of rousseau s time to the splintering of disciplines into competing ways of knowing under the pressures of specialization and professionalization during the late romantic age of thoreau his book thus traces an unfolding drama in which these writers and their contemporaries each situated in an intellectual landscape more fragmented than the last seek to keep together what modern culture is determined to break apart autobiography is a long established literary modality of self exposure with commanding works such as augustine s confessions rousseau s book of the same title and salvador dalí s paradoxical reformulation of that title in his unspeakable confessions like all genres with a distinguished career autobiography has elicited a fair amount of critical and theoretical reflection classic works by kèate hamburger and philippe lejeune in the 1960s and 70s articulated distinctions and similarities between fiction and the genre of personal declaration especially since foucault s seminal essay on self writing self production through writing has become more versatile gaining a broader range of expression diversifying its social function and colonizing new media of representation for this reason it seems appropriate to speak of life writing as a concept that includes but is not limited to classic autobiography awareness of language s performativity permits us to read life writing texts not as a record but as the space where the self is realized or in some instances de realized such texts can build identity but they can also contest ascribed identity by producing alternative or disjointed scenarios of identification and they not all autobiographers are unreliable narrators yet what a writer chooses to misrepresent is as telling perhaps even more so as what really happened timothy adams believes that autobiography is an attempt to reconcile one s life with one s self and he argues in this book that autobiography should not be taken as historically accurate but as metaphorically authentic adams focuses on five modern american writers whose autobiographies are particularly complex because of apparent lies that permeate them in examining their stories adams shows that lying in autobiography especially literary autobiography is not simply inevitable rather it is often a deliberate highly strategic decision on the author s part throughout his analysis adams s standard is not literal accuracy but personal authenticity he attempts to resolve some of the paradoxes of recent autobiographical theory by looking at the classic question of design and truth in autobiography from the underside with a focus on lying rather than truth originally published in 1990 a unc press enduring edition unc press enduring editions use the latest in digital technology to make available again books from our distinguished backlist that were previously out of print
