In a pathbreaking new assessment of the shaping of black male identity in the early twentieth century Martin Summers explores how middle class African American and African Caribbean immigrant men constructed a gendered sense of self through organizational life work leisure and cultural production examining both the public and private aspects of gender formation Summers challenges the current trajectory of masculinity studies by treating black men as historical agents in their own identity formation rather than as screens on which white men projected their own racial and gender anxieties and desires manliness and its discontents focuses on four distinct yet overlapping social milieus the fraternal order of Prince Hall Freemasonry the Black Nationalist Universal Negro Improvement Association or the Garvey movement the modernist circles of the Harlem Renaissance and the campuses of historically black Howard and Fisk universities between 1900 and 1930 Summers argues dominant notions of what it meant to be a man within the black middle class changed from a Victorian ideal of manliness characterized by the importance of producer values respectability and patriarchy to a modern ethos of masculinity which was shaped more by consumption physicality and sexuality Summers evaluates the relationships between black men and black women as well as relationships among black men themselves broadening our understanding of the way that gender works along with class sexuality and age to shape identities and produce relationships of power

Down the Up Staircase tells the story of one Harlem family across three generations connecting its journey to the historical and social forces that transformed Harlem over the past century Bruce D. Haynes and Syma Solovitch capture the tides of change that pushed blacks forward through the twentieth century the Great Migration the Harlem Renaissance the early civil rights victories the Black Power and Black Arts movements as well as the many forces that ravaged black communities including Haynes's own as an authority on race and urban communities Haynes brings unique sociological insights to the American Mobility Saga and the tenuous nature of status and success among the black middle class in many ways Haynes's family defied the odds all four great grandparents on his father's side owned land in the South as early as 1880 his grandfather George Edmund Haynes was the founder of the National Urban League and a protégé of eminent black sociologist W. E. B. Du Bois his grandmother Elizabeth Ross Haynes was a noted children's author of the Harlem Renaissance and a prominent social scientist yet these early advances and gains provided little anchor to the succeeding generations this story is told against the backdrop of a crumbling three-story brownstone in Sugar Hill that once hosted Harlem Renaissance elites and later became an embodiment of the family's rise and demise Down the Up Staircase is a stirring portrait of this family each generation walking a tightrope one misstep from free fall
