they unite together not to cheat themselves but to lead their life in happiness nineteenth century britain witnessed a dramatic increase in its town population as a hitherto largely rural economy transformed itself into an urban one though the political and social issues arising from these events are well known little is known about how the british legal process coped with the everyday strains that emerged from the unprecedented scale of these changes this book explores the river pollution dilemma faced by the british courts during the second half of the nineteenth century when the legal process had to confront the new incompatible realities arising from the increasing amounts of untreatable waste flowing into the rivers this dilemma struck at the heart of both victorian urban and rural society as the necessary sanitary reformation of the swelling cities and expanding industry increasingly poisoned the rivers threatening the countryside and agricultural rents and livelihoods focusing on ten legal disputes the book investigates the dilemma that faced the courts namely how to protect the traditional and valued rights of landholders whose rivers and lands were being polluted by industrial waste and untreated sewage whilst not hindering the progress of sanitary reform and economic progress in the towns the case studies considered involve major industrialising centres such as birmingham leeds northampton wolverhampton and barnsley but also include smaller towns such as tunbridge wells leamington spa and harrogate the fundamental issues raised remain as important today as they did in victorian times the need for the courts to balance a variety of conflicting needs and rights within the limits of contemporary technological capabilities often played out in surprising ways with outcomes not always in line with theoretical expectations as such the historical context of the disputes provide fascinating insights into nineteenth century legal process and the environmental and social attitudes of the times committee serial no 88 16 in this volume the author reviews the results of research on language performance and proposes a model of production and comprehension although recent developments in linguistics are taken into account consideration of other requirements of a performance model leads to the conclusion that the grammar the speaker has in mind differs from the grammar as currently conceived of by most linguists the author is also critical of recent computer simulations of language performance on the basis that they fall short of describing what goes on in human production and comprehension the author therefore proposes that the basic issues must be rethought and new theoretical foundations reformulated in order to arrive at a viable
