from acclaimed political scientist diana mutz a revealing look at why people s attitudes on trade differ from their own self interest winners and losers challenges conventional wisdom about how american citizens form opinions on international trade while dominant explanations in economics emphasize personal self interest and whether individuals gain or lose financially as a result of trade this book takes a psychological approach demonstrating how people view the complex world of international trade through the lens of interpersonal relations drawing on psychological theories of preference formation as well as original surveys and experiments diana mutz finds that in contrast to the economic view of trade as cooperation for mutual benefit many americans view trade as a competition between the united states and other countries a contest of us versus them these people favor trade as long as they see americans as the winners in these interactions viewing trade as a way to establish dominance over foreign competitors for others trade is a means of maintaining more peaceful relations between countries just as individuals may exchange gifts to cement relationships international trade is a tie that binds nations together in trust and cooperation winners and losers reveals how people s orientations toward in groups and out groups play a central role in influencing how they think about trade with foreign countries and shows how a better understanding of the psychological underpinnings of public opinion can lead to lasting economic and societal benefits this paper examines possible explanations for winner loser reversals in the national stock market indices of 16 countries there is no evidence that loser countries are riskier than winner countries either in terms of standard deviations covariance with the world market or other risk factors or performance in adverse economic states of the world while there is evidence that small markets are subject to larger reversals than large markets perhaps because of some form of market imperfection the reversals are not just a small market phenomenon the apparent anomaly of winner loser reversals in national market indices therefore remains unresolved democratic elections are designed to create unequal outcomes for some to win others have to lose this book examines the consequences of this inequality for the legitimacy of democratic political institutions and systems using survey data collected in democracies around the globe the authors argue that losing generates ambivalent attitudes towards political authorities because the efficacy and ultimately the survival of democratic regimes can be seriously threatened if the losers do not consent to their loss the central themes of this book focus on losing how losers respond to their loss and how institutions shape losing while there tends to be a gap in support for the political system between winners and losers it is not ubiquitous the book paints a picture of losers consent that portrays losers as political actors whose experience and whose incentives to accept defeat are shaped both by who they are as individuals as well as the political environment in which loss is given meaning given that the winner loser gap in legitimacy is a persistent feature of democratic politics the findings presented in this book contain crucial implications for our understanding of the functioning and stability of democracies comparative politics is a series for students and teachers of political science that deals with contemporary government and politics the general editors are professor alfo mastropaolo university of turin and kenneth newton university of southampton and wissenschaftszentrum berlin the series is published in association with the european consortium for political research
