this book develops an empirical realist theory to enable the united states to respond effectively to rising security threats and to seize new opportunities for global governance more successfully than have past policies a synthesis of peace research and security studies shows that a global grand strategy for human security with u s national security folded into it is likely to produce more security for the united states than a grand strategy for national security pursued as an end in itself more security advantages are likely to result from maximizing the causes or correlates of peace than from maximizing u s military power peace reigns when these correlates are present all nations security fears are addressed people can meet basic needs nations enjoy reciprocal rights and duties they are treated equitably their lives are predictable because the international system is governed by the rule of law and they participate in the decisions that affect their lives through fair representation in democratic global governing processes this approach revolutionizes thinking about national security policy by transforming it into human security policy evidence suggests that the anarchic militarized balance of power system can be gradually changed with help from enhanced international lawmaking and enforcing capacities to promote change concerned policymakers and citizens could withdraw their support from u s policies that do not serve the common good and work to implement a global grand strategy for human security that would simultaneously serve u s security interests and uphold the value of human dignity for all agribusiness development has been constrained by distorted economic policies and institutional controls in the emerging market economies and in most of the developing countries in the former soviet union and eastern europe the agribusiness complex was dominated by state owned enter prises in many of the developing countries economic policies discriminated against agriculture and agribusiness the results have been obvious despite major technological advances agriculture and agribusiness sectors in these economies remained inefficient a large share of the population particularly in the rural areas has not been able to improve household incomes and living standards the final decade of the 20th century will certainly be recorded as one of the most dynamic in modern history the restructuring of the former soviet union and eastern europe and market reforms in many of the developing countries are progressing at a rapid pace agribusiness is key to economic performance in these areas in that agriculture is an important sector in many of these economies economic transition to a market economy is presenting many challenges and opportunities to accelerate the process of agribusiness development which is so essential to alleviate rural poverty an international symposium organized by the international fertilizer development center ifdc provided a unique opportunity to discuss needed policy reforms to promote efficient and competitive agribusiness development with a particular focus on privatization and deregulation
