excerpt from building code a compilation of building regulations covering every phase of municipal building activity with special emphasis on fire preventive features fire prevention is a better watchword than fire protection and a rapidly increasing number of people are beginning to realize it town and city councils find that it is better to have buildings in their midst which will not readily catch fire rather than to maintain an expensive fire department to protect fire traps and allow new fire traps to be built in congested localities strange as it may seem it took years of strenuous effort on the part of the believers in this principle of fire prevention before the movement could gain sufficient headway to become a potential 58 force in the constructive activity of this country in the end the is owner the architect and the contractor have had to be compelled by proper municipal legislation to build according to fire prevention specifications before much progress could be made the effect of this restrictive legislation is shown in its most complete form in europe where the broader area of the congested districts and the scarcity of lumber have forced the problem to its i natural solution much earlier than in this country the wonderfully elective neighboring risk idea by which each owner is made liable for damage to his neighbor s property through fires due to his own carelessness or to the neglect of proper preventive methods has also helped to stimulate the rapid adoption of the prevention measures resulting in fire losses per capita in different parts of europe which are from six to twenty times lower than the figure for this country and this too in the face of a much denser population about the publisher forgotten books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books find more at forgottenbooks com this book is a reproduction of an important historical work forgotten books uses
