covering the 1960s and 1970s this volume explores new ways of investigating comparing and interpreting the different domains of design culture across the nordic countries challenging the traditional narrative this volume argues that the roots of the most prominent features of nordic design s contemporary significance are not to be found amongst the objects for the home collectively branded as scandinavian design to great acclaim in the 1950s but in the discourses institutions and practices formed in the aftermath of that oft told success story during the turbulent period between 1960 and 1980 this is achieved by employing multidisciplinary approaches to connect the domains of industrial production marketing consumption public institutions design educations trade journals as well as public debates and civic initiatives forming a design culture this book makes a significant contribution to current international agendas of historiographical critique focusing on transnational relations and the deconstruction of national design histories this book will be of interest to scholars in design design history and scandinavian studies

what is honor is it the same as reputation or is it rather a sentiment is it a character trait like integrity or is it simply a concept too vague or incoherent to be fully analyzed in the first sustained comparative analysis of this elusive notion frank stewart writes that none of these ideas is correct drawing on information about western ideas of honor from sources as diverse as medieval arthurian romances spanish dramas of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries and the writings of german jurists of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries and comparing the european ideas with the ideas of a non western society the bedouin stewart argues that honor must be understood as a right basically a right to respect he shows that by understanding honor this way we can resolve some of the paradoxes that have long troubled scholars and can make sense of certain institutions for instance the medieval european pledge of honor that have not hitherto been properly understood offering a powerful new way to understand this complex notion honor has important implications not only for the social sciences but also for the whole history of european sensibility evidence has been mounting for some time that intensive row crop agriculture as practiced in developed countries may not be environmentally sustainable with concerns increasingly being raised about climate change implications for water quantity and quality and soil degradation this volume synthesizes two decades of research on the sustainability of temperate row crop ecosystems of the midwestern united states the overarching hypothesis guiding this work has been that more biologically based management practices could greatly reduce negative impacts while maintaining sufficient productivity to meet demands for food fiber and fuel but that roadblocks to their adoption persist because we lack a comprehensive understanding of their benefits and drawbacks the research behind this book based at the kellogg biological station michigan state university and conducted under the aegis of the long term ecological research network is structured on a foundation of large scale field experiments that explore alternatives to conventional chemical intensive agriculture studies have explored the biophysical underpinnings of crop productivity the interactions of crop ecosystems with the hydrology and biodiversity of the broader landscapes in which they lie farmers views about alternative practices economic valuation of ecosystem services and global impacts such as greenhouse gas exchanges with the atmosphere in contrast to most research projects the long term design of this research enables identification of slow or delayed processes of change in response to management regimes and allows examination of responses across a broader range of climatic variability this volume synthesizes this comprehensive inquiry into the ecology of alternative cropping systems identifying future steps needed on the path to sustainability
