roughly one in ten adult americans find their walking slowed by progressive chronic conditions like arthritis back problems heart and lung diseases and diabetes in this passionate and deeply informed book lisa i iezzone describes the personal experiences of and societal responses to adults whose mobility makes it difficult for them to live as they wish partly because of physical and emotional conditions and partly because of persisting societal and environmental barriers basing her conclusions on personal experience a wealth of survey data and extensive interviews with dozens of people from a wide social spectrum iezoni explains who has mobility problems and why how mobility difficulties affect people's physical comfort attitudes daily activities and relationships with family and friends throughout their communities strategies for improving mobility and how the health care system addresses mobility difficulties providing and financing services and assistive technologies iezoni claims that although strategies exist to improve mobility many people do not know where to turn for advice she addresses the need to inform policymakers about areas where changes will better accommodate people with difficulty walking this straightforward and engaging narrative clearly demonstrates that improving people's ability to move freely and independently will enhance overall health and quality of life not only for these persons but also for society as a whole these are the worst of times these are the best of times it s dxas so tag it on something enter james aberdeen half optimist half masochist and half something else this pensive young immigrant is about to take a leap from high school alienation to university angst centred in london this passage evokes the contemplation that his days of frivolousness are numbered and his descent into responsibility is about to begin during this careful evolution into adulthood taking place over summer vacation he ponders daily encounters and muses about the mysteries and ironies of life all while trying to have fun naturally

James's opinions are developed relative to the naivety of a new adult ranging from the enigma of heavy petting to that of laymen quantum mechanics as summer draws to a close the story winds to an unexpected finale in fact in this tale's quaint imitation of life many things are not as they appear the narrator's adventures both in mind and body are often complimented by the presence of three close friends each with very different perspectives all four are characters in their own right hobbling along on life's comical journey
