illustrated by a range of case studies of affordable housing options in canada this book examines the liveability and affordability of twenty first century residential architecture focussing on the architects and communities commitment to these housing programmes as well as that of the private building sector it stresses the importance of the context of the neighbourhoods in which they are placed which are either in the process of urban transition or already gentrified in doing so the book shows how and to what extent twenty first century dwelling architecture developments can help to create an integrated sense of community diminish social and demographic exclusions in a neighbourhood and incorporate people's desires as to what their buildings should look like this book shows that there are significant architectural projects that help to meet the needs and desires of low to middle income households as well as homeowners and that gentrification does not necessarily lead to the displacement of low income families and singles if housing policies such as those highlighted in this book are put into place moreover the migration of the middle class can result in a healthy mix of classes out of which everyone can enjoy a peaceful and habitable coexistence accessible and affordable housing can enable community living maximize independence and promote health for vulnerable populations however the united states faces a shortage of affordable and accessible housing for low income older adults and individuals living with disabilities this shortage is expected to grow over the coming years given the population shifts leading to greater numbers of older adults and of individuals living with disabilities housing is a social determinant of health and has direct effects on health outcomes but this relationship has not been thoroughly investigated in december 2016 the national academies of sciences engineering and medicine convened a public workshop to better understand the importance of affordable and accessible housing for older adults and people with disabilities the barriers to providing this housing the design principles for making housing accessible for these individuals and the features of programs and policies that successfully provide affordable and accessible housing that supports community living for older adults and people with disabilities this publication summarizes the presentations and discussions from the workshop
