the dramatic race to transplant the first human heart spanned two years three continents and five cities against a backdrop of searing tension scientific brilliance ethical controversy racial strife and emotional turmoil it culminated in a terrifying moment in the early hours of 3 december 1967 when in a cramped operating theatre in a cape town hospital professor chris barnard stared into an empty cavity from which he had just removed a heart he knew that he had only minutes left to make history and save the life of a 55 year old man by filling the gaping hole in his chest with a heart which had just been beating inside a 25 year old woman every second counts is the story of this gripping race to conquer the greatest of medical challenges it also reveals the truth about the man at the centre of it all whose turbulent life story was just as gripping the kind of true story that would be dismissed as far fetched if presented as fiction it combines an utterly compelling portrait of cutting edge science with raw human drama and shows how the course of medicine itself was changed for ever shortlisted for the 2015 william hill sports book of the year prize i kill a man and most people forgive me however i love a man and many say this makes me an evil person on 24 march 1962 when emile griffith stepped into the ring in madison square garden to defend his world title against benny paret he was filled with rage during their weigh in the cuban challenger had denounced griffith as a faggot and minced towards him in the macho world of boxing where fighters know they are engaged in the hurt game there could be no greater insult at that time it was illegal for people of the same gender to have sex or even for a bar to knowingly serve a drink to a gay person it was an insinuation that could have had dangerous consequences for griffith especially as it was true in the fight that followed griffith pounded paret into unconsciousness and the cuban would die soon after leaving griffith haunted by what he had done despite this he went on to fight more world championship rounds than any other fighter in history in a career that lasted for almost 20 years in donald mcrae s first sports book in more than a decade he weaves a compelling tale of triumph over prejudice griffith was black so doubly damned by contemporary society but refused to cower away as society wished a man s world is a classic piece of sports writing don mcrae has followed boxing all his life despite the fact it often disappoints and upsets him in recent years don mcrae s immersion in contemporary boxing had not been at the pitch of intensity he had felt in the 1990s when he wrote dark trade a book which won the william hill sports book of the year but when his sister died in september 2018 at a time when cancer had taken hold of his mother with his father and mother in law to be similarly affected soon after he sought refuge in boxing again desperately hoping it would offer respite and some strange kind of comfort sadly his re immersion reveals that corruption doping and criminality gnaw away at the soul of boxing as mcrae investigates further he begins to wonder if the time will soon come for him to finally escape a troubled and troubling business for good in this book both his most personal and explosive he tries to reconcile the contradictions of hope and despair salvation and ruin which lie at the murky heart of a sport he s followed for 50 years the history of medicine is a living one and involves much more than reflecting on the battles that have been won or lost in the ever changing struggle against disease the living history really lies within man himself and too often the human side of this story is neglected as doctors we have been trained to focus on the signs of disease and consequently we pay little attention to the people who discovered them when we read in our pathology texts about the interesting triad of defects in an illness such as hand schuller christian disease we tend to forget about the doctors who faced great personal hardships to bring us the information we now use to treat the disorder dr treacy is recognised as one of the most influential aesthetic practitioners in the world he was awarded top aesthetic practitioner in the world 2019 and doctor of the year uk ireland 2019 in this fascinating book he takes us on a journey with osler s famed goddess of medicine and explains how she is continually on the move fleeing from battles tyranny and oppression seeking to find a home where man can have study pathology in peace she has moved from edinburgh to dublin from london to vienna from berlin to maryland then onwards to california to guide doctors in the wonders of new technologies translating the genetic blueprint manipulating defects in the data code of our existence and help us all fight the more complex diseases like the coronaviruses of the new millennium organ transplantation is one of the most dramatic interventions in modern medicine since the 1950s thousands of people have lived with new hearts kidneys lungs corneas and other organs and tissues transplanted into their bodies from the beginning though there was simply a problem surgeons often encountered shortages of people willing and able to give their organs and tissues to overcome this problem they often brokered financial arrangements yet an ethic of gift exchange coexisted with the commodification of the body the same duality characterized the field of blood transfusion which was essential to the development of modern surgery this book will be the first to bring together the histories of blood transfusion and organ transplantation it will show how these two fields redrew the lines between self and non self the living and the dead and humans and animals drawing on newspapers magazines legal cases films and the papers and correspondence of physicians and surgeons lederer will challenge the assumptions of some bioethicists and policymakers that popular fears about organ transplantation necessarily reflect timeless human concerns and preoccupations with the body she will show how notions of the body intact in parts living and dead are shaped by the particular culture in which they are embedded a comprehensive history of the development of artificial hearts in the united states artificial hearts are seductive devices their promissory nature as a cure for heart failure aligned neatly with the twentieth century american medical community s view of the body as an entity of replacement parts in artificial hearts shelley mckellar traces the controversial history of this imperfect technology beginning in the 1950s and leading up to the present day mckellar profiles generations of researchers and devices as she traces the heart s development and clinical use she situates the events of dr michael debakey and dr denton cooley s professional fall out after the first artificial heart implant case in 1969 as well as the 1982 83 jarvik 7 heart implant case of barney clark within a larger historical trajectory she explores how some individuals like former us vice president dick cheney affected the public profile of this technology by choosing to be implanted with artificial hearts finally she explains the varied physical experiences both negative and positive of numerous artificial heart recipients mckellar argues that desirability rather than the feasibility or practicality of artificial hearts drove the invention of the device technical challenges and unsettling clinical experiences produced an ambivalence toward its continued development by many researchers clinicians politicians bioethicists and the public but the potential and promise of the artificial heart offset this ambivalence influencing how success was characterized and by whom packed with larger than life characters from dedicated and ardent scientists to feuding texas surgeons and brave patients this book is a fascinating case study that speaks to questions of expectations limitations and uncertainty in a high technology medical world for building sustainable peace and security the time is always now violence in our world extends beyond armed conflicts it exists in our social and economic structures not to mention in our destruction of the environment how can we build more sustainable development and peace in this innovative ambitious book dr luc reychler argues that we must drastically change our temperament or the way we deal with time he surveys the vast temporal landscape and considers its many dimensions such as how time relates to emotions religion and conflict and how our time horizons affect the natural world using examples such as hurricane katrina and regime change in libya reychler shows how time is misused in conflicts be it the failure to anticipate a disaster or the manipulation of time to create a false sense of urgency ultimately he proposes a more adaptive attitude to time so that we can be proactive rather than reactive in our efforts at sustainable development and conflict resolution in the cramped and dizzying space of two years from June 1924 to June 1926 America was transfixed by three contrasting courtroom trials each was described as a trial of the century and featured Clarence Darrow America's most charismatic but troubled defence lawyer as he tried to overcome public outrage and his own private struggle to keep faith in the justice system they also served as his own route to redemption for Darrow was in the midst of trying to restore his reputation after he had twice been put on trial for attempting to bribe a jury although he had been acquitted Darrow in his late sixties was desperate to wipe the stain from his name at the same time and in one of the book's dramatic new revelations Darrow rekindled an old affair with a passionate writer and activist Mary Field who was the secret love of his life more than eighty years later the public themes which Darrow confronted still resonate powerfully in contemporary society sex and murder celebrity and race religion and science politics and justice the media and the law love and deception belief and terror rise up as vividly today as they did in the roaring twenties the world remains just as fractured and uncertain as that which Darrow surveyed in the three final iconic cases of his life

Hamlet's mortal coil which eventually and inevitably we shuffle off when we enter the sleep of death as he puts it has never been static indeed how the human body and its component parts have been understood individually and collectively has shifted across time shaped by culture religion and technology in this probing and provocative new book Fay Bound Alberti uses the global histories of medicine pathology and emotions to explore these changing notions each chapter uses a different focus bones skin sexual organs spine tongue heart revealing how each body part connects to a peculiarly western notion of expertise one which appropriates one element from the others and ignores their interconnection the themes examined in this mortal coil the nature of identity the relationship between the brain and the heart and the gendering of our physical and emotional selves are enduring ones but perceptions of the perfect body or perfect health evolve constantly moving between the surface and what lies beneath Alberti provides a rich and fascinating accounting of each part shedding light on the role scientific developments from medical care to plastic surgery to cloning plays in how we look at ourselves written with insight and narrative verve Alberti's provocative book reveals how the mortal coil can be unwound and looked at as if for the first time

Paul Craddock's Spare Parts offers an original look at the history of medicine itself through the rich compelling and delightfully macabre story of transplant surgery from ancient times to the present day how did an architect help pioneer blood transfusion in the 1660s why did eighteenth century dentists buy the live teeth of poor children and what role did a sausage skin and an enamel bath play in making kidney transplants a reality we think of transplant surgery as one of the medical wonders of the modern world but transplant surgery is as ancient as the pyramids with a history more surprising than we might expect Paul Craddock takes us on a journey from sixteenth century skin grafting to contemporary stem cell transplants uncovering stories of operations performed by unexpected people in unexpected places bringing together philosophy science and cultural history Spare Parts explores how transplant surgery constantly tested the boundaries between human animal and machine and continues to do so today witty entertaining and illuminating Spare Parts shows us that the history and future of transplant surgery is tied up with questions about not only who we are but also what we are and what we might become one of the 50 best nonfiction books of the last 25 years slate on New Year's Day 2013 two time Pulitzer Prize winner Gene Weingarten asked three strangers to literally pluck a day month and year from a hat that day chosen completely at random turned out to be Sunday December 28 1986 by any conventional measure a most ordinary day Weingarten spent the next six years proving that there is no such thing that Sunday between Christmas and New Year's turned out to be filled with comedy tragedy implausible irony cosmic comeuppances kindness cruelty heroism cowardice genius idiocy prejudice selflessness coincidence and startling moments of human connection along with evocative foreshadowing of momentous events yet to come lives were lost lives were saved lives were altered in overwhelming ways many of these events never made it into the news they were private dramas in the lives of private people they were utterly compelling one day asks and answers the question of whether there is even such a thing as ordinary when we are talking about how we all lurch and stumble our way through the daily daunting challenge of being human
