arnade argues that they were a vital theater of power through which the ducal court and the urban centers constantly renegotiated their relationship this book is the first to apply the combined insights of social political and cultural history to an important but little explored area of medieval and early modern europe the burgundian netherlands realms of ritual traces the role of ritual in encounters between the dukes of burgundy later the habsburg princes and the townspeople of ghent the most important city in the county of flanders arnade analyzes city state ceremonies through which ghent s aldermen patricians guildsmen and the city s military and drama confraternities confronted local power and the growth of the burgundian state in the first serious reappraisal of johan huizinga s classic work the waning of the middle ages arnade confirms huizinga s vision of a low country society rich in public symbols yet reveals the city state conflict within which such ritual thrived he offers a dramatically new perspective on the northern renaissance as well as a historical anthropological model for the study of urban state relations i was originally an immortal but because my six collaboration between two scholars from different fields of religious studies draws on three comparative data sets to develop a new theory of purity and pollution in religion arguing that a culture's beliefs about cosmological realms shapes its pollution ideas and its purification practices the authors of this study refine Mary Douglas's foundational theory of pollution as matter out of place using a comparative approach to make the case that a culture's cosmology designates which materials in which places constitute pollution by bringing together a historical comparison of ancient near eastern and mediterranean religions an ethnographic study of indigenous shamanism on Jeju Island Korea and the reception history of biblical rhetoric about pollution in Jewish and Christian cultures the authors show that a cosmological account of purity works effectively across multiple disparate religious and cultural contexts they conclude that cosmologies reinforce fears of pollution and also that embodied experiences of purification help generate cosmological ideas providing an innovative insight into a key topic of ritual studies this book will be of vital interest to scholars and graduate students in religion biblical studies and anthropology this multidisciplinary companion offers a comprehensive overview of the global arena of public art it is organised around four distinct topics activation social justice memory and identity and ecology with a final chapter mapping significant works of public and social practice art around the world between 2008 and 2018 the thematic approach brings into view similarities and differences in the recent globalisation of public art practices while the multidisciplinary emphasis allows for a consideration of the complex outcomes and consequences of such practices as they engage different disciplines and communities and affect a diversity of audiences beyond the existing art world the book will highlight an international selection of artist projects that illustrate the themes this book will be of interest to scholars in contemporary art art history urban studies and museum studies if I am to believe the words that I am reading this collaboration between two scholars from different fields of religious studies draws on three comparative data sets to develop a new theory of purity and pollution in religion arguing that a culture s beliefs about cosmological realms shapes its pollution ideas and its purification practices the authors of this study refine mary douglas foundational theory of pollution as matter out of place using a comparative approach to make the case that a culture s cosmology designates which materials in which places constitute pollution by bringing together a historical comparison of ancient near eastern and mediterranean religions an ethnographic study of indigenous shamanism on jeju island korea and the reception history of biblical rhetoric about pollution in jewish and christian cultures the authors show that a cosmological account of purity works effectively across multiple disparate religious and cultural contexts they conclude that cosmologies reinforce fears of pollution and also that embodied experiences of purification help generate cosmological ideas providing an innovative insight into a key topic of ritual studies this book will be of vital interest to scholars and graduate students in religion biblical studies and anthropology
