The Medical Age 1889

this original and provocative study tells the story of american literary history from the perspective of its environmental context weaving together close readings of early american texts with ecological histories of tobacco potatoes apples and honey bees michael ziser presents a method for literary criticism that explodes the conceptual distinction between the civilized and natural world beginning with the english exploration of virginia in the sixteenth century ziser argues that the settlement of the new world and the cultivation and exploitation of its bounty dramatically altered how writers used language to describe the phenomena they encountered on the frontier examining the work of harriet grainger cooper thoreau and others ziser reveals how these authors whether consciously or not transcribed the vibrant ecology of north america and the ways that the environment helped codify a uniquely american literary aesthetic of lasting importance this book recalls an era when criticism could change the way we look at the world in the tradition of matthew arnold and edmund wilson james wood reads literature expansively always pursuing its role and destiny in our lives in a series of essays about such figures as melville flaubert chekhov virginia woolf and don delillo wood relates their fiction to questions of religious and philosophical belief he suggests that the steady ebb of the sea of faith has much to do with the revolutionary power of the novel as it has developed over the last two centuries to read james wood is to be shocked into both thinking and feeling how great our debt to the novel is in the grand tradition of criticism wood's work is both commentary and literature in its own right fiercely written polemical and richly poetic in style this book marks the debut of a masterly literary voice

this book employs a transitional justice lens to address the disappearances that occurred during the northern ireland conflict or troubles and the post conflict response to these disappearances despite an extensive literature around dealing with the past in northern ireland as well as a substantial body of scholarship on disappearances in other national contexts there has been little scholarly scrutiny of disappearances in post conflict northern ireland although the good friday agreement brought relative peace to northern ireland no provision was made for the establishment of some form of overarching truth and reconciliation commission aimed at comprehensively addressing the legacy of violence nevertheless a mechanism to recover the remains of the disappeared the independent commission for the location of victims remains iclvr was established and has in fact proven to be quite effective as a result the reactions of key constituencies to the disappearances can be used as a prism through which to comprehensively explore issues of relevance to transitional justice scholars and practitioners pursuing an interdisciplinary approach and based on extensive empirical research this book provides a multifaceted exploration of the responses of these constituencies to the practice of disappearing it engages with transitional justice themes including silence memory truth acknowledgement and apology key issues examined include the mobilisation efforts of families of the disappeared efforts by a former non state armed group to address its legacy of violence the utility of a limited immunity mechanism to incentivise information provision and the interplay between silence and memory in the shaping of a collective societal understanding of the disappeared
