Handbook of Interpersonal Commitment and Relationship Stability 2012-12-06 a fundamental assumption underlying the formation of our most important relationships is that they will persist indefinitely into the future as an acquaintanceship turns into a friendship for example both members of this newly formed interpersonal bond are likely to expect that their interactions will become increasingly frequent diverse and intimate over time this expectation is perhaps most apparent in romantically involved couples who through a variety of verbal and symbolic means make explicit pledges to a long lasting relationship in either case it is clear that these relationships represent something valuable to the individuals involved and are pursued with great enthusiasm virtually all close relationships are formed within the context of mutually rewarding interactions and or strong physical attraction between partners friends and romantically involved couples alike are drawn to one another because of similarity of attitudes interests and personality and quite simply because they enjoy one another s company this enjoyment coupled with the novelty that characterizes new relationships almost makes the continuation of the relationship a foregone conclusion as relationships progress however their novelty fades conflicts may arise between partners negative life events may occur and the satisfaction that previously characterized the relationships may diminish

Living in Britain 2000 in this book professor jeanine grenberg defends the idea that kant s virtue theory is best understood as a system of eudaemonism indeed as a distinctive form of eudaemonism that makes it preferable to other forms of it a system of what she calls deontological eudaemonism in deontological eudaemonism one achieves happiness both rationally conceived as non felt pleasure in the virtually unimpeded harmonious activity of one s will and choice and empirically conceived as pleasurable fulfilment of one s desires only via authentic commitment to and fulfilment of what is demanded of all rational beings making persons as in all things to tell this story of deontological eudaemonism grenberg first defends the notion that kant s deontological approach to ethics is simultaneously and indeed foundationally and most basically teleological she then shows that the realization of an aptitude for the virtuous fulfilment of one s obligatory ends provides the solid basis for simultaneous realization of happiness both rationally and empirically conceived along the way she argues both that kant s notion of happiness rationally conceived is essentially identical to aristotle s conception of happiness as unimpeded activity and that his notion of happiness empirically conceived is best realized via an unwavering commitment to the fulfilment of one s obligatory ends
